

St. Mary's Students Have Fallen Down In Chapel Behavior Recently

For many years the students of St. Mary's have respected all that the Chapel means to the school. They value the moments of silence and religious guidance found there. St. Mary's, being a church school, places much emphasis on the religious phase of the students' personalities; therefore, these peaceful times will long be remembered and appreciated by all.

This spring, however, a few students have fallen down in their behavior in the Chapel and have forgotten the deep meanings of the services. The lack of attention of a few, causes the distraction of the other worshippers. It is in the Chapel that one finds the needed time for silence and meditation. Since school days are so filled with activities, the Chapel periods mean a great deal to many students; therefore, The Belles reminds the small number who have fallen down in their chapel behavior to act as a respectful congregation in order to allow the majority to gain the full benefit of the inspiring services.

May Day Was Quite An Affair

May Day was planned for Saturday, May 4. Friday it was cold. It rained Saturday. And it was cold too. We had the Dedication of Penick Hall outside. We all shivered. May Day was held in the gym. There wasn't much room. At least it was warm. There were lots of people there. The May Court looked pretty. Coleman did too. The May Pole was carried out. We did that. We made a boo-boo. The May Court danced around the pole. The streamers were too long. Legare couldn't dance. Jo tried to teach her. Some figures in black torment-ed her. Grace gave her some grace. Rhythm did a little dance. Beauty came out and looked pretty. Choreography really put on a show. Then Legare could dance. All the dancers had a finale. The May Court left. May Day was over. But we had it again on Monday. It was pretty outside. The wind blew. The court pinned their hats on this time. I wish I could dance. I can't. I wish I were pretty. I'm not. I wish I had something. I don't.

Beckoning Belles

Spring is really here, and there are plenty of wasps to prove it. I like Spring, but those varmints are down right vicious.

Mighty odd sounds have been drifting over from the May Day stomping grounds. Sounds positively Chee-full!!!

Last weekend was a big one because those who could went home . . . those who couldn't just laid low and SACKED!!!

There is one thing very lacking in our school life (besides males,) and that is good conversation. If the people of the future have our traits in intensified form, then, our great grandchildren are going to be born mute.

Warning: Hold on to your boy buddies. There is a dangerous animal loose called a P.W. Just ask Cobbie and Katy about this beast's appetite. So far it has eaten only "teddy bears," but you'd better watch out.

A word for the wise is sufficient . . . take a pillow when you go to see The Ten Commandments. Also, leave your intelligence behind 'cause it won't do you any good.

What A Frog!

By Brooks Newton

A frog when dissected is complex indeed.
 If one is not careful he'll most surely bleed.
 His liver lies o'er all his innermost parts.
 Catch it quick 'fore that bleeding starts!
 His legs are all muscles with veins in between,
 And now by his kidney I see his blue spleen.
 Oh, there are his heart and his lungs to be sure.
 How much of this torture must I still endure!
 Please tell me why did I elect this here course?
 For all it has brought me are tears and remorse.
 If e'er I do finish, believe me my friend
 Concerning Biol'gy this frog is the End!
