Imago Performs at Saint Mary's

By Kim Goines

On Feb. 26, 1990, a group of three, two men and one woman, who call themselves "Imago" performed in the gym for the Saint Mary's student body. The performance was a combination of dance, mime, and acrobatics, where the three actors did such interpretations as frogs, golfers, orbs, a cowboy, a baby, and a slinky.

The performers are originally from Portland, Oregon, and tour extensively all over the world. They have put on shows in both Asia and Germany and, in addition, have their own special cable show called "The New Vaudevillians."

The theatre mask ensemble used lights, masks, and certain props to create illusions and add other dimensions to their skits. One interesting aspect of the show was that the ensemble included the audience in several of the skits and called for some volunteers from the crowd. This aspect seemed to make the performance more appealing and interesting to the students.

Earlier that day, the group held a workshop at Saint Mary's for those interested, and focused on the use of masks in mime and how to make illusions. The three actors also remained after the show to answer questions and demonstrate their use of sticks, lights, movements, and props.

The general response coming from students seemed positive. Carolyn Bullock commented, "Usually, I'm not fond of performance art but I was very impressed by this version of it." Many students were very excited about the show and revealed great interest in the dance, acrobatics and other theatrical aspects. Cary Hodges found the show to be "very life-like — almost too realistic and kind of scary." The performance was definitely successful in getting a reaction.

Vegetarian diet gains popularity at SMC

By Amy Lea Henrick

It was Tommy Chong of "Cheech and Chong" fame who said, "That's like my worst nightmare: to wake up and be a vegetarian." The truth is, you don't wake up one day and poof! You're a vegetarian. It's a little more complicated than that.

People decide to be vegetarians for widely different reasons. Some feel remorse at the death of an animal. I know one vegetarian who doesn't like the taste of meat. And somebody once told me that they felt that in the early days of man it was okay to eat meat—they needed it to survive; but today man doesn't need meat to survive, so why be so wasteful? Whatever the reason, vegetarians are becoming a growing segment of the population.

Evidence of this uprising is in the growing availability of vegetarian food on the market. Any
