

For Church Goers.

In an uptown church in New York, the writer found the following "Hints for Church Attendants" printed on slips scattered among the pews:

"1. Prepare for divine service in your closet, not at your toilet.

"2. Be early at church, and occupy the moments before service with meditation and prayer.

"3. Consider the sermon, no matter who may be the preacher, as a message to you from God, not as an effort of man.

"4. Pray before, during and after the service for the minister and your fellow-worshippers.

"5. In God's house all should be kindly affectioned one to another with brotherly love, in honor preferring one another. Welcome strangers into your pews; but let all be done reverently, and for the glory of God.

"6. Give according to your means. If you spend money for dress and luxuries, do not stint your offerings for God's house. Always begin to economize with self first, and with God last.

"7. Carry your religion into your daily life."—Exchange.

The Lady Who Always Smiled.

If we could know just the impression we make on those about us, there is no question but that we should profit by the lesson, even though it might sometimes be a hard one. A lady once called on a friend's family, and, not finding anyone at home, she left without giving her name.

The lady of the house returned before the rest of the family, and the hired man told her that a visitor had been there.

"Who was it?" inquired the lady.

"Oh, I don't know her name," replied the man.

"But you should have asked her," said his mistress, "so we would know who had been here. Can't you tell me anything by which I can know who came? Where does she live?"

"I don't know," said the man, "but she's the one that always smiles when she speaks.

The pleasant look and the courteous manner in which the lady had spoken to the servant had been noticed and remembered, leaving a sunbeam in that man's heart.—Selected.

Golden Maxims.

In the pocket of Hon. Stephen Allen, who was drowned on the Henry Clay, was found a printed slip, apparently cut from a newspaper, from which the following is copied. It is worthy to be engraved on the heart of every one:

Keep good company or none. Never be idle; if your hands can not be usefully employed, attend to the cultivation of your mind.

Always speak the truth. If anyone speaks evil of you, let your life be such that none will believe him.

Drink no kind of intoxicating drinks.

When you retire to bed, think over what you have done through the day.

Avoid temptation through fear you may not withstand it.

Earn money before you spend it.

Do not put off till tomorrow that which should be done today.

Never speak evil of any one. Keep pure if you would be happy.

Save when you are young, to spend when you are old.

Read the above maxims at least once a week.

The Highest Heroism.

There is yet harder and higher heroism—to live well in the quiet routine of life; to fill a little space because God wills it; to go on cheerfully with a pretty round of little duties, little occasions; to accept uncomplainingly a low position; to smile for the joys of others when the heart is aching; to banish all ambition, all pride and all restlessness in a single regard to our Savior's work.

To do this for a lifetime is a greater effort, and he who does this is a greater hero than he who for one hour storms a breach, or for one day rushes onward undaunted in the flaming front of shot and shell.

His works will follow him. He may not be a hero to the world, but he is one of God's heroes, and though the builders of Ninevah and Babylon be forgotten and unknown, his memory shall live and be blessed.—Dean Farrar.
