

Francesca's
Italian style café with ice cream, coffee, pastries, and cakes. Their apple cider is for some reason fantastic

George's Garage
Mediterranean food served buffet style and charged by the pound - but still delicious and fairly cheap

Locopops (On Hillsborough, east of 9th Street)
Paletas, Mexican style popsicles with some very deliciously unusual flavors.

One World Market
A volunteer-based fair trade store that sells things made by people in underdeveloped countries. Really cool gifts, jewelry, home décor, and all for a good cause.

Manhattan Pizza
It's pizza. Big pieces of greasy, delicious pizza. What could be bad about that?

Ninth Street

Native threads
Funky clothes, gifts, decorations, etc. It's the one with the big frog out front.

Chubby's Tacos
Cheap, cheap, cheap (but not as cheap as Cosmic Cantina) and good, good, good. They're also environmentally conscious, with cups made out of corn and forks made out of potatoes.

Elmo's Diner
Good old-fashioned diner food. Think bacon and eggs, toast, pancakes, and burgers for when you need some comfort food.

Banh's Cuisine
Like a boring friend that goes nuts on the weekend, this restaurant is packed on Wednesdays and Saturdays, when its normally limited selection of Chinese food is replaced by the delicious Vietnamese vegetarian special.

International Delights
Delicious international (by which we mean Middle Eastern) cuisine. Gyros, falafel, hommos, tabouleh, and Philly cheesesteaks. And if you don't get fries, DON'T ask for ketchup.

Cosmic Cantina
Between Ninth and Broad, Cosmic has pretty good Mexican food, outdoor seating, and fast service at ridiculously low prices. Don't come expecting frills, or, really, anything but food.

Whole Foods Market
An organic grocery store right across the street from Duke East. They also have a great buffet and salad bar.

Ben and Jerry's
40 delicious varieties of ice cream and sorbet. Go eat some and watch your life suddenly be better.

Mad Hatter's
Great fresh food and a funky atmosphere. Complete with a display case full of desserts to make you drool.
