Francesca's Italian style café with gelato, coffee, pastries, and cakes. Apple cider is fantastic.

Ox and Rabbit Eclectic soda shop; eco-friendly and highquality soda ice cream drinks and lots of fun, odd trinkets

Devil's Pizza It's pizza: big pieces of greasy, delicious pizza. responsible for the nighly Happy Half van Locopops (On Hillsborough, east of 9th Street) Paletas, Mexican style popsicles with some delicious flavors and some unusual ones.

One World Market A volunteer-based fair trade store that sells things made in underdeveloped countries. Really cool gifts, jewelry, home décor, and all for a good cause.

Native threads Funky clothes, gifts, decorations, etc. It's the one with the big frog out front.

Chubby's Tacos Cheap, cheap, cheap (but not as cheap as Cosmic Cantina) and arguably the best Mexican food around. They're also environmentally conscious, with cups made out of corn and forks made out of potatoes.

International Delights (mostly) Middle Eastern cuisine: gyros, falafel, hommos, tabouleh, and philly cheesesteaks. DON'T ask for ketchup!

Elmo's Diner Mix of old-fashioned and contemporary diner food. Think bacon and eggs, pancakes, burgers, and chocolate malts...

Banh's Cuisine Standard, even boring Chinese restaurant during the week, but offers a wide variety of Vietnamese options on Wednesdays and Saturdays

Ninth Street

Cosmic Cantina Between Ninth and Broad, Cosmic has dirtcheap but very good Mexican food. Located in the second floor of a building. Don't come expecting frills, or, really, anything but your meal.

Whole Foods Market

An organic/high-grade grocery store right across the street from Duke East. They also have a great buffet and salad bar.

Ben and Jerry's

40 delicious varieties of ice cream and sorbet. Go eat some and watch your life suddenly be better.

Mad Hatter's

Fresh food and a funky atmosphere. Complete with several display cases filled to the brim with desserts made in-house.