

ing, which you do so nicely.

Kathleen Conrad: When you feel yourself blushing Kathleen, put on a little of this powder to cover it up.

Spaugh Thompson: Spaugh I give you this jumping rope. As you are the most dignified member of our class, we should like to see you limber up a bit.

Savannah Beck: Please make good use of this "cracker" and let us hear you make a noise.

Early Everhart: From your work in school I think you will make a good school teacher, so I give you this red pencil. Mark the mistakes gently in the name of the Class of '23.

Lucy Belle Leonard: To our song-bird, I give this canary. May it always warble, and we hope that some day you will have great success in the music world.

Bruce Conrad: In view of the fact that your jokes may some day grow stale, I give you this joke book. Don't be afraid to use it.

Mary Sink: Mary, I give you this bottle of red ink. May it help you with your Book-keeping.

Percy Leonard: Though you came to us from the country you are a good sport. As you haven't had a water-pistol this year, I am giving you one, hoping that some of the Senior boys will be kind enough to show you how to use it.

Edna Conrad: Edna, I am giving you this Victrola record. Play it and try to keep up with it, you may find that it isn't so hard to talk after all.

Florence Sink: Take this rule and during your years of teaching, use it lightly on your pupils.

Griffith Smith: I give you this mule. May you become so disgusted with its stubbornness that you will change your disposition.

Lois Hackney: To you Lois, I give this charming, cute and fat little doll, that when you are old and gray you can look at it and say, "A perfect picture of me in my high school days."

Raymond Hedrick: As birds of a feather should flock together, I give you this monkey. May each bring joy to the other.

Christine McCrary: Here are the last of the cough-drops to be found in Lexington; you have bought all the rest of them.

Joe Conrad: For fear that you may feel lost at college without your Ford, we give you this one. Be careful not to exceed the speed limit of Raleigh.

Protus Koonts: Protus, you have depended on others long enough, take this cane and try to support yourself in the future.

Herman Leonard: I give you this package of diamond dye. Take it and keep your hair dyed black lest you may suffer a sun stroke.

Charles Davis: And last, but not least to our class president, I give this snake, on account of his fondness for such animals. May it be a reminder of your last year in high school.

To our Mascot: I give this doll, may she enjoy it and remember the Senior Class of 1923.

CLASS SONG.

No doubt you've heard songs of many things,

Most of them about maidens fair,
They all sing songs of the things that they love,

So we'll sing of a subject most rare;
Each Senior's heart shall always sing in praise

To dear L. H. S., the school that is best,
And our happy though toilsome high school days,

And we hope that this song,
That we sing will live so long,
That you never, never will forget
the name of L. H. S.

Chorus

School days, dear school days,
As they pass we hold them fast in mem'ry dear,
And we are hoping and longing
That our friendship life shall never sever,

And we'll all succeed together.
School days, dear school days,
As we sing our voices ring with love so true,

For we've worked and played with all our might,
And we've tried to do the thing that's right.

Then Seniors come, let's smile with faces bright,
For our school days are the best days of them all.

CHRISTINE McCRARY.

WHAT THE SENIOR CLASS HAS CONTRIBUTED TO SCHOOL ACTIVITIES.

The Senior Class of nineteen hundred and twenty-three has made a large contribution to the different school activities. The class has contributed to every athletic sport.

In basketball, there were two senior boys out of five. These were Joe Walser, guard, and Roy Peacock, manager and sub. center.

In football, three senior boys were on the team. These were Moton Leonard, guard, and Bruce Conrad, half back, also Joe Walser, manager, and Cortez Anderson, center.

In base ball, there were also two senior boys on the team. These were Bruce Conrad, third base, and Ray Zimmerman, short stop.

In Tennis, the class contributed a senior boy, Joe Walser, player and manager.

In the Girls' Basket Ball, the class contributed Ella Raper, captain and star forward of the team.

The High School debating team was composed of four seniors. These were Lois Hackney and Christine McCrary, affirmative, and Ella Raper and Joe Conrad, negative. The team was very successful, altho it lost in the state championship contest. Each member of the team was a splendid speaker and each one deserves credit for the time and work put on these splendid debates.

To The Lexhipep, the senior class contributed six members of the staff, these being Virginia McCarn, Ella Raper, Christine McCrary, Lois Hackney, Charles Davis and Joe Walser.

The class has the honor of having and being the only class in the High School to have one hundred percent in subscribers to the school paper, which is a fine proof of real school spirit.

Now that the class is leaving old L. H. S., knowing that next year and the years to come these places in the different activities of the school will be left open only to those live, energetic school-spirited students who are willing to try to help keep up the record of L. H. S., the class of twenty-three sincerely hopes that they will still put her forward by making her known to the high schools everywhere.
