WASHINGTON

inals on record. The first night out Richard, Charlie, and W. Stanford went to choir practice, of all places! At the same time a dozen varied incidents took place. Margaret O. fell out of the bathtub, I am told. Jean Wooten glimpsed what was believed to be a little devil. It turned out to be "Tinker" in his red pajamas. The BPPA (Black Petunia Poker Association) was in full swing at all times except after twelve midnight—Saturday. (Also a few rummy parties.) Harold was disappointed to find that the "Gaieties" were closed awaiting a new show. At the Bureau of Printing and Engraving souvenirs of seven dollar bills were handed out to each member of the party, believe it or not.

On to the roller-coaster, was the cry Friday night as Glen Echo was taken by storm. Bus drivers, Clarence and Mr. Smart, became favorites of Dot and Eula Mae. Bill J. and Bill H. came away with the nickname of "Tubba", while Margaret O. and J. E. almost did not come away. Three guesses why!??!

On Saturday a trip to Mt. Vernon was in order. The crowd returned to natural environment of barefoot boys and girls from North Carolina. During the day little "Termite" hooked not one, but FOUR girls. Please don't underestimate "Termite." The climb to the top of the Washington Monument was most interesting. Little Robert Dougherty had to "rest" about half way up on the trip.

On Sunday the capital became too small for Charlie, Richard, Murphy, Bill, and several others. They resorted to Baltimore for a breather. Harold discovered that his shoes were among some missing articles. They turned up in suite 307, occupied by Judy, Pat, Margaret, Kathryn, and Jean.

Starting back, we discovered every one had the brogue. Richard was so wrapped up in it that he could not pronounce many words: elevator was alevator and finally came out lift. In other words, the elevator operator wore a lift uniform!!!

On the trip we passed the "Harris" high school. The joke's on Tommy. At Endless Caverns the tall and the fat had a rough time. In spite of the fact that the guide forbade anyone to remove the stone formations, Peeler, Jake, Streetman, and W. Stanford have stalactites imbedded in their heads, while Big Bailey almost stuck in the small places. He didn't become firmly lodged due to the wet rocks and six people pushing from behind.

Monday night a tired, but happy, crowd of kids returned to God's country. The trip was really wonderful and everyone enjoyed every minute of the five days, including three full days in the city without a cloud in anybody's sky.
