Deluge Necessitates Room Evacuation

Evacuation of four rooms in the cafeteria building was necessary Tuesday when rooms 21, 23, 25 and 27 were condemned as unsafe because a two-inch stand of water on the roof threatened to injure the ceiling, and water from the recent heavy rains had penetrated the classrooms.

Instructors who occupied the rooms, F. Edgar Thomas, Miss Lillian Secrest, Miss Lottie Burnside and Miss Grace Alton, held their Wednesday classes in other buildings until arrangements could be made for continuance of studies.

Commenting on the "flood" Tuesday, Principal A. P. Routh stated that the rooms would soon be reoccupied.

Action Speaks Louder Than Words

Silence reigned supreme. As students found their seats and waited expectantly for their instructor to begin the lesson, an air of bewilderment settled about the room. As the pupils kept waiting for Miss Sara Mims to tell them of the glamorous aspects of a gerundive, she pointed to a proclamation posted on the blackboard.

"I have lost my voice. I am sorry, and I know you are devastated that we can't have a lesson!"

"Please use the period to prepare your Monday's assignment. It should keep you busy and quiet all period: 12 rules and 15 sentences."

"Your assignment is a long one. Get to work on it. Remember. I still have my strong, right arm. Quiet, please."

"See you Monday!"

P. S. "I can still see and hear. Now get to work."

Awed by the "handwriting on the wall," the class remained as silent as a school house on Saturday for the entire period, but—got results.

To gain further information concerning the debate query, Rachael Whiteside, Neil Beard, Paul Miller, Herbert Hattaway and Miss Mozelle Causey went to Chapel Hill last Tuesday to confer with the students from South America.
