

National Honor Society Inducts 17 Seniors

Civil Defense Committee Meets, Discusses Plans Of Evacuation Of School

Mr. Fredrickson and Claude orchestra teacher, again this year is serving as chairman of the GHS Civil Defense Committee.

Mr. Fredrickson and Claude Manzi, assistant chairman, head a committee consisting of eight teachers. The committee, having a faculty member to represent each building on the campus, is made up of S. L. Whiteley, who is in charge of the Science Building; Mrs. Lucille Hillman, the Home Economics Building; Miss Mildred Maddox, Main Building; and Frank P. Bondanella, the Commercial Building.

Faculty Members

Faculty members representing the rest of the campus are Miss Jeanne Meredith, Music Building; Carl E. Sauls, Vocational Building; Mrs. Eleanor Lambert, Girls' Gym; and Julian Smith, Boys' Gym.

This group of teachers is working on plans that will best serve GHS in case of enemy attack. According to a bulletin from the office of Charles D. Bates, chairman of the Greensboro Council of PTA's, the main objective for this year's Civil Defense school program is to "plan, organize, and carry out an evacuation for each school, and to arrange for the Red Cross to conduct classes for adults in First Aid and other vital courses."

Critical Area

Greensboro has been described by the Civil Defense Headquarters in Washington, D. C. as the only "critical target area" in North Carolina. Plans are therefore being formulated for large scale evacuation. Routes have been plotted so that Greensboro citizens who are seeking safety will not conflict with Winston-Salem or Raleigh residents trying to leave their city also.

Photo By Greensboro Record
Newly tapped members into Torchlight, Greensboro's chapter of the National Honor Society, are, front row, left to right, Elizabeth Antrim, Ruth Hunt, Judy Kellett, Jane McLennon, Jerry Mann, Maranell Pearsall, Lynn Rankin, Margie Rose and Harriet Wells; Back row, left to right, Elwood Hartman, Gilbert Frank, Stratton Eldridge, Allen Thomas, Rich Aderhold, Jack Jessup, William David Miller, and Tom Hudgins.

GHS Career Day Plans Now Nearing Completion

Plans for Careers Day which is being sponsored by the Student Council Thursday November 29, are nearing completion, according to Bill O'Brien, Student Council president.

Seniors, juniors, and sophomores will participate in all Careers Day activities. The principal purpose of this special day is to present students information which will guide them in deciding on perspective careers.

Some time ago, every student in the school was given an interest form to fill out. Through this he indicated his three choices for a later occupation. The forms were tabulated, giving a person his first and second choices as a study group whenever possible. Out of 41 professions offered, secretarial work, the armed forces, nursing, and teaching ranked highest in that order.

Outstanding Speakers

Professional and business men and women, all outstanding in their respective fields, have been scheduled to talk with students on this day. These people will speak briefly about advancement opportunities, pay, hours, and qualifications necessary for particular areas in which students are interested. No attempt will be made to glamorize a profession, but rather each speaker will strive to present unbiased facts upon which a sound decision may be based.

Day's Schedule

The usual schedule for this day will be altered a great deal. Home room period, first and second periods will take place as usual. Then at 11 a. m. all home rooms will report to the auditorium where a keynote speaker will address the student body. The speaker is to be Phillip Weaver, director of instruction for the Greensboro schools.

Continued on Page Four

Torchlight, NHS, Taps Many New Members

Seventeen Greensboro Senior High School seniors were tapped into Torchlight, National Honor Society, in a suspenseful assembly program Thursday, November 13.

To a background of Ave Maria, Rick Aderhold, Elizabeth Antrim, Stratton Eldridge, Gilbert Frank, Elwood Hartman, Tom Hudgins, Ruth Hunt, and Jack Jessup were tapped by one of the eight present members. Others selected were Judy Kellett, Jane McLennon, Jerry Mann, William David Miller, Maranell Pearsall, Lynn Rankin, Margie Rose, Allen Thomas, and Harriet Wells.

The 17 new members were chosen on the basis of scholarship, leadership, service, and character. Five of the present members and A. P. Routh, principal, presented these qualities to the student body.

James Spence delivered the ideas of scholarship, Buck Hoyle leadership; Camille Merriman, service; and David Craig, character. Jean Ogburn, society president, presided over the tapping and briefly delivered the overall aims of Torchlight.

The devotional for the program was conducted by Mrs. Norma Garrett, Bible teacher, who spoke of achieving high goals.

Continued on Page Four

THANKSGIVING PAGEANT TO BE GIVEN BY JUNIOR CLASS THIS WEDNESDAY

"Lest we Forget," will be the theme of the Thanksgiving pageant presented by the Junior Class in assembly Wednesday, November 21.

The Indians' Thanksgiving and the customs before the coming of the white man will be covered in the first act. Act two will portray the landing of the Pilgrims and their first Thanksgiving feast, while in act three Dr. Folger, as a Pilgrim minister, will close the play in a large puritan church scene.

Wallace Williams, Junior Class president, is leading a committee, under the direction of Mrs. Sara Summers, in planning and writing this production. Peggy Sink, Marilyn Pearce, Jean Medearis, Connie Coltrane, Jan Phillips, and Laura Pearce compose the script writers while Rufus Russell serves as technical director.

Costume Committee

In charge of costumes are Jim McGregor and Harry Smith, while Miss Lottie Burnside and Miss Dixie Huske supervise the make-up and costumes. Mrs. Jean Newman, junior class advisor and Mrs. Jennie Parker will work with Prissy Wyrick, Wallace Williams, and Ellen Rankin in charge of direction and general work.

Music, supervised by Miss Jeanne Meredith, will be furnished by the orchestra and special members of the junior choir. Organ music will be supplied by Nancy Hewett.

Narrative parts for the play will be filled by Peggy Sink and Wallace Williams, while George Murphy and Max Snodderly will portray the Indian chief and Squanto, respectively. Speaking parts for the Pilgrim men will be played by Add Penfield, Joe Matherly, Harry Smith, Ronnie Price, and Carey Sloan. The part of a small Pilgrim boy will be played by Raymond Spaulding. Portraying the parts of Pilgrim women will be Magie Fishburne, Lee Pickard, Meyressa Hughes and Susan Levine. Frances McCormick, Kit Cooper, and Evelyn Byrd will characterize the parts of Indian women.

A cast of Pilgrim men and women is composed of Linda Pultz, George Bradham, Paul Tobin and Bill Johnston. Linda Harrison and Cookie Wilson are Pilgrim children. Roger English, Tommy Glascock, Norman Crutchfield, Boyce Crothers, David Levy, John Burwell, Jim McGregor, Louis Gentry and Walter Willard complete the list of Indians.

Quill and Scroll Club Members Select Jane McLennon HOMESPUN Editor

Quill and Scroll members November 12 elected officers for the school year 1956-57. Ann Butler, club president, conducted the voting. Pictured above are, left to right, Ann Butler, president; Jane McLennon, HOMESPUN editor; Katherine Polk, secretary; and Elwood Hartman, treasurer.

Jane McLennon, senior, was elected editor of HOMESPUN at the second Quill and Scroll meeting Monday, November 12 in room 10.

Jane's duties will be to take the responsibilities of putting out HOMESPUN, Senior High's literary magazine which is presented in the spring. Last year's editor was Diana Harnton.

Elected as the new secretary of the club was Katherine Polk, senior, while Elwood Hartman, also a senior, was chosen to serve as treasurer.

Ann Butler, the organization's president, informed the 11 new members that they will be able to order Quill and Scroll pins which will cost $2.50. Along with the pins they will receive a copy of the Quill and Scroll International Honorary Society For High School Journalists magazine.

This magazine contains among its articles information about the various jobs available in the field of journalism and a review of several books, both fiction and non-fiction about journalism that are available to the public.

D. E. Students Cop Places During District Convention

Four Senior High Distributive Education students were elected to office at the district convention in Lexington, November 7, according to Mrs. Margaret G. Hadden, D. E. co-ordinator.

Don Hicks, senior, was elected president of the district, while Der Hong Hanson, junior, was chosen associate president. Ellen Cole and Barbara Taylor, both seniors, became the new district secretary-treasurer and editor promotional manager, respectively. John Russell, senior, was a member of the nominating committee, while Roy Sowers, senior, and Bill Goode, junior, were voting delegates.

Mary Ann Matherly, senior, placed third in the job application contest. She was judged on neatness, poise, grace, and the manner in which she answered the questions of the interviewer.

Don Hicks represented Mrs. Hadden's classes in the speech contest. He was given a phase of Distributive Education and its importance in national economy about which to speak. He had an hour to plan his talk.

The purpose of this annual convention was that of letting D.E. students from the entire district become acquainted with each other, learning what other D.E. groups are doing, and electing officers.