

Five Represent Grimsley At Boys and Girls State

Boys State and Girls State were held June 16-22. Grimsley High was represented at the convention by five students.

BOYS STATE

Each year GHS sends delegates to Boys State, held at the University of North Carolina. For one week these boys attend lectures to learn more about our national, state, and local governments. This year Boys State was held June 16-22. The delegates from GHS were Penn Holsenbeck and Jim Byrd. The boys arrived Sunday afternoon and heard a lecture given by Governor Sanford Sunday night. They were divided into two political parties. Half of them were Federalists and half were Nationalists. Each party chose a candidate for all of the city, county, and state offices. They elected the city officers Monday, and on Thursday the county officers were elected. Friday morning they had a debate to introduce the candidate for state offices.

Friday night the assembly elected the state officers. Jim Byrd was elected to the Supreme Court and Penn Holsenbeck was elected to the Secretary of State. Saturday a meeting of the General Assembly was held. All the boys who had been elected to offices were in the Senate and the others were in the House of Representatives. They voted on and passed a bill. Boys State ended with a banquet held Saturday night.

GIRLS STATE

Girls State was held at UNC-G June 16-22. It is sponsored annually by the American Legion Auxiliary. Girls State is designed to teach the girls who attend more about national, state, and local government.

The delegates from Grimsley this year were Ann Phillips, Ann Lashley, and Linda Filipki. They attended lectures given by prominent politicians and teachers. The girls were divided into two political parties, the Nationalists and the Federalists. They chose candidates and held elections for each of the city, county, and state offices.

On the last day the girls visited Raleigh, where the girl who had been elected governor was inaugurated. From the Capitol they went on to tour Duke University and State College. Their tour ended at the University of North Carolina where they met with Boys State

Sophomore Final Election To Be Held October 3

Oct. 8 Dates Induction Of Soph. Class Officers

Sophomore primary elections will be held Monday with the final elections occurring October 3.

The induction of the newly-elected Sophomore class officers will be held October 8 in a general assembly attended by the school body.

The application blanks for the various offices of the sophomore class were first available in the Guidance Center September 16, the deadline for signing applications being September 18. Places were indicated on the blanks for the class, office he wished to run for and his signature.

On September 20, the first meeting of the candidates and their campaign managers was held to discuss poster and campaign fee qualifications. The group also practiced for the Presentation Assembly which was held last Tuesday. During the assembly each candidate was presented and the office he was running for was announced.

The candidates running for the higher offices made speeches concerning the type of officer he would make and the things he would do for the school while in office. These candidates were introduced by their respective campaign managers.

After the Presentation Assembly, the campaign managers were allowed to put up posters advertising their candidates. In the past the students were allowed to place their posters any where they pleased. This year, however, the posters were only allowed to be tacked up outside rather than inside the buildings.

As in the past, students competed for the offices of President, Vice-President, Secretary and Treasurer of the Sophomore Class. Also needed were Sophomore representatives to the Student Council and the Youth Council.

After the elections take place, the Sophomore officers will begin attending the various council meetings and will take their places as part of the governing body of Grimsley High School.

400 Students Attend

Governor's School Held At Winston; Four Students Represent Grimsley

First North Carolina Governor's School was held at Salem College in Old Salem, Winston-Salem, North Carolina, from June 1 to August 2.

Courses in the fields of the humanities, foreign languages, mathematics, natural sciences, fine arts, music (vocal and instrumental), dance, and drama were offered to approximately 400 students. Each student concentrated in one field of study. He was selected on the basis of his aptitude, ability, and interest.

Grimsley High School representatives were Betty Jo Pearce, English; Jane Godwin, history; Fred McCall, math; and Donald Jones, science.

Five hours a day the students were in class. The remaining daylight hours were spent studying, writing letters, playing bridge, participating in athletics, or anything else the student wished to do.

Lectures and concerts were held at night. Mrs. Enrico Fermi, wife of one of the creators of the atomic bomb; Mr. Arthur Larson, Head of Duke's School of International Law; and such prominent North Carolinians as Dr. Lefler, Paul Green, and Frank Porter Graham were a few of the guest speakers.

TWELFTH NIGHT was presented by the Governor's School Players and the band gave a concert.

The Governor's School received much publicity. The Huntley-Brinkley news crew filmed classroom scenes and interviewed several students. The Today Show also filmed scenes of the school. An article on the Governor's School appeared in the June 28 issue of TIME. The SATURDAY EVENING POST also reviewed the school.

The Carnegie Foundation made available to the North Carolina State Board of Education $225,000 toward the cost of operating the Governor's School. This grant was matched by contributions from individuals, industries, and foundations of Winston-Salem. A total amount of $450,000 was used to operate the school.

Tuition, board, room, books, and instructional supplies were furnished without charge to the student. There was no charge for activities sponsored by the Governor's School. Free laundry service was also available to the students.

The 1963 Governor's School was mostly an experiment. It served as a model for schools wishing to improve their own program for the gifted student, and it helped to train teachers and administrators in providing experiences for gifted students.

Assembly Passes Act

North Carolina General Assembly passed many acts for the improvement of the state's public schools last spring. The acts were designed to affect many people in the public school system.

Teachers' salaries were increased, and funds were provided to grant teachers a cumulative five-day sick leave. Salaries of principals were better adjusted. Money was also appropriated to lengthen the term of employment of principals in the larger schools.

Sixty-one guidance counselors will be employed to strengthen the state's compulsory education law. Funds were appropriated to employ forty-nine additional assistant superintendents in cities where there are large school administrative units.

Legislation was enacted to reduce high school book fees and to provide a more adequate supply of high school textbooks. An average of twenty-five cents per pupil will be allocated to help local school units purchase audio-visual aids.

Over a two year period, one hundred teachers each year will be provided to teach the mentally retarded, the hard-of-hearing, the visually handicapped, and the physically handicapped. Funds will also be provided for the employment of one hundred and fifty additional teachers to work with gifted students. The Prospective Teachers' Scholarship Loan Program for worthy high school students desiring to become teachers was expanded with more funds.

One and a half million dollars was allocated for experimental programs in high school trade and industrial education. Funds were provided for additional equipment in industrial education centers. There will be necessary funds for the increase in the number of vocational education teachers. In addition, the General Assembly increased the bus drivers' salaries, and local boards of education were given the authority to make school cafeterias available for public use.
