themselves wearing beautiful clothes walking down the runway.

Nina Shay, a local success story is proof positive that with preparation and dedication our own local girls can make their dreams of becoming a professional model a reality.

Known by Nina Shay as her professional name, Danita Rice Howard, daughter of Ollie Patricia Sadler and William Rice, was born in Winston-Salem. She relocated to New York as a child, but came home regularly to visit the family. She was first approached to consider modeling while a student at the prestigious Fashion Institute of New York studying Fashion Merchandising. Her career took off from there and expanded to Print Modeling, Radio, TV Commercials and parts in several movies. To enhance her broadcasting skills Shay recently completed courses at NYU School of Broadcasting.

Most recently Nina Shay concluded a successful four year run as the primary correspondent on "Main Floor", ABC's thirty minute weekly fashion and beauty entertainment show. After joining the show in September of 2000, Shay quickly became one of the shows most recognizable and respected faces, bringing a fresh perspective and appeal to the oldest fashion and beauty entertainment show.

Reporting on the latest trends and covering the Red Carpet at the Screen Actors Guild, Emmy and Women in Film Awards Shows, Nina has gone one-on-one with some of Hollywood's most prominent personalities including Jodie Foster, Stockhardt Channing, Debbie Allen, Kate Hudson, Rob Lowe, Megan Mullaly
