Congressman Seeks Hearing On Voter ID

Congressional hearings are being requested to look into whether the U.S. Department of Justice improperly approved Georgia's voter ID law, which is currently being blocked by a federal court injustice. The law would require residents to show a driver's license or purchase a photo identification card before voting. According to the Voting Rights Act of 1965, Georgia is required to receive federal approval for any changes to its voting laws due to the state's history of discrimination at the polls. It is believed that the law was approved in August by Justice Department political appointees in charge, despite staff attorneys warning against that action, for fear that it would cause Black people not to vote.

HBCU Received Black Male Recruitment Grants

FORT VALLEY, GA—The University System of Georgia has awarded historically Black Fort Valley State University and nine other institutions in the state with African American Male Initiative grants to help increase Black male enrollment. The grants, in amounts from $15,000 to $30,000, are expected to take care of program costs that try and recruit Black males while they are in high school. Walton County and FVSU have joined together to assist 25 Black males through next summer in a program called Dual Enrollment and Collaborative Learning for Access to a Rewarding Education (DECLARE). The main objective of the program for the county is to increase the graduation rate in 2005 of 34 percent to 75 percent by 2009. The DECLARE program will have the participants go on field trips, and attend seminars and classes at Fort Valley State.
