Harvard Man Speaks Here

Dr. Richard Mott Gummere, chairman of the committee on admission to Harvard college, last Tuesday afternoon spoke to a group of faculty members and students at Queens college on "Standards of Admission."

Dr. Gummere was introduced by James M. Godard, dean of instruction at the college.

He began his discussion by explaining the contents of the application blank sent to each prospective student of Harvard college. The application is in four sections consisting of information concerning routine data, methods of applying, names of sponsors who would write recommendations, and the previous school record. Each boy requesting entrance is asked to write one essay on why he wants to go to that school.

He said this information is asked in order to be able to give his sympathetic understanding, his aim in school life, his brightness, and his judging ability. Someone who knows the boy well is asked to write an essay telling the story of his school work.

Dr. Gummere discussed other subjects, such as college board tests and various experiments being tried by the admission boards of several large colleges.

After the discussion, in the parlor of Burwell hall, Dr. Gummere was the dinner guest of the college in the dining hall of Morrison dormitory. After dinner, he attended a coffee at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Howard MacGregor. Mr. MacGregor is the treasurer of the college.

Dr. Gummere has been in his present position at Harvard college since 1934, when he was appointed to succeed Henry Pennypacker. He is a trustee of Haverford college and of Bryn Mawr college, regent of the Cum Laude society, and has been president of the Phi Beta Kappa society of Haverford college, of the Accrediting commission of the Middle States Association of Schools and Colleges, and of the Contemporary club of Philadelphia. He is also a member of many other educational organizations.

Student Body Picks Twelve

The members of the student government association of Queens college decided in one of their weekly meetings that they wanted to elect only twelve beauties for the annual this year in place of the usual sixteen, four from each class. It was also decided to select the beauties from the student body as a whole and not from individual classes.

The girls elected for the honor were Marjorie Poole of Mullins, S. C.; Katherine Kittles of Charlotte, Anne Pease of Charlotte, Brooksie Folger of Charlotte, Marie Pons of Valdese, Frances Stough of Cornelius, Laura Mitchell of Fairmont, Anne Wiley of Charlotte, Nan Daniels of Charlotte, Doris Raley of Ruby, S. C.; Cornelia Truesdale of Kershaw, S. C., and Tiny Waddill of Charlotte.

There were four members of the senior class—Marjorie, Anne, Brooksie, and Frances; two members of the junior class—Marie Pons and Cornelia; two members of the sophomore class, Doris and Tiny; and four members of the freshman class, Anne, Katherine, Laura, and Nan.

The pictures of these twelve girls will be sent to some well-known person in keeping with the theme of the annual. He or she will pick them out in order of beauty. The results will not be announced until they are published in the annual.

Superlatives Are Picked

The class superlatives were chosen by the seniors in their last meeting before exams started. Betsy Springer, president of the class, presided over the meeting.

The class voted to have fewer and more appropriate superlatives for this year. They were very careful to elect girls really suited for each title. No girl could be elected for more than one title.

The ten titles and the girls winning them are as follows: the most capable, Anne Fuller of Buffalo, Ala.; the most sincere, Annie Carr Powers of Hamlet; the most personality, Scottie McNulty of Pocahontas, Va.; the most athletic, Martha Stoner of Elberton, Ga.; the most stylish, Anne Pease of Charlotte; the most popular, Frances Stough of Cornelius; the most versatile, Lucille Gwaltney of Charlotte; the most dignified, Analane Cheers of Pageland, S. C.; the most intellectual, Elizabeth Greene of Charlotte, and the most original, Libba Harms of Charlotte.

The names and pictures of these girls along with their titles will appear in the annual this spring.

Button Button Here's Hutton

It's started all over again. Is swing through? We heard it last year; now we're hearing it again. Has the rug-cutter gone with the side-wheeler? Is the Dipsy-Doodle dipsy, or only a doodle?

All the people who ever heard a band, and a lot who have only heard about one, are sounding off with pages of theory. Here we are, though, with the final words on the great American riddle.

Our guest today is Marion Hutton, vocalist with Glenn Miller, who really knows what America wants. Got a name for it, Marion? Is it a new kind of swing?

"I don't know."

How come?

"Glenn's the only band I've ever sung with. Almost the only band I've ever heard. I don't know what to call what he does. I just like it fine."

Diogenes, you can turn off that flashlight and go on home. When the honest man turns out to be a pretty girl, we'll carry on for you.

Magna Charta

For centuries the Magna Charta has been a great document in the fight for freedom in England. Now the Magna Charta has become a great document in Burgess Meredith's fight for freedom. Throwing off a yoke of many years, Meredith will sing in public in honor of the Magna Charta on CBS's Pursuit of Happiness on February 4th.

A former choir boy, as well as necktie salesman, Wall Street runner, sailor, and Amherst freshman, Meredith has been singing for his friends only. It has taken the urging of two people who have heard him in unguarded moments, to get him to let the radio audience listen to him singing the lead in a ballad history of the historic document, now reposing in the Congressional Library. The two responsible are Maxwell Anderson and Kurt Weill who wrote the lyrics and music.
