ORPHANS' FRIEND.

Wednesday, Nevember 7, 1877

The President has named a day of thanksgiving for the bountiful harvests and unnumbered blessings which have crowned the year. But a Greater than the President has said: "If ye love me, keep my commandments." Obedience is better than thanks. How many will "visit the fatherless," with their contributions on that day?

REPORTS BY THE TEACHERS.

The orphans are divided into Four Graded Forms, each in charge of a teacher, whose report The highest number is 10; the lowest is 1. When the average is below 5, the orphan is liable to be discharged as not "promising," and therefore excluded by the regulations. This paper contains the report made by the teacher

RIDICULOUS, BUT TRUE.

During the autumn of 1842, I was in Algiers, and, one pleasant day, I joined a party of French officers in a jaunt into the back country- The distance from the coast-or from the city of Algiers-to the northernmost sweep of the Atlas mountains, is not quite twenty miles, and thitherward we took our way to see the sights. My particular object was to see the district whence came the chief supply of gum Arabic. On the first night out, we found quarters with a Peola peasant, whose household was far from repulsive or unpleasant.

On the following morning, we found our host preparing to go to the forest. He said he was going to examine his monkey traps. Three of us went with him; and the first trap we visited held a monkey, whose facial contortious and sharp chattering and screaming, as we approached, were frightful. And what do you suppose that trap was? How was the monkey caught? I will tell you.

Attached to a limb of an acacia tree by a strong cord was a gourd, the shell of which was tough, strong and intact, saving a small round hole on one side. Within this gourd the peasant had placed a small quantity of nuts, of which the monkey is very fond. Well, the monkey discovers the gourd in a strange position, and he in-vestigates. Very soon, he determines that some of his favorite nuts are within. Aha! here is a treat. The hole is just large enough to admit his hand; he feels the nuts, and in his eagerness to make a good thing of it, he gathers up all he can grasp. But when he tries to withdraw his hand, it does not come forth. Closed, with a gill of nuts in its grasp, the hole is not half large enough to let it out. Poor avaricious wretch! he can not surrender his prize or, at all events, so eager to secure it is he that the idea of letting go never enters his head. And there he remains, snapping and growling, vainly trying to get his hand free with the prize in possession. And so it is until morning—until the man who exposed the bait comes and takes both gourd and monkey. He is very angry, and anon looks very crest-fallen and foolish; but there is no help for it.

I saw four monkeys captured in that same way while tarrying in the shadows of the Atlas mountains.—N. Y. Ledger.

The beauty and greenness of summer is departing, to be fol-lowed with the fall of the leaf. The song of the birds in the early dawn of day is no longer heard. The earth begins to put off the summer robes of green, soon to put on her winter robes of snow. It is well, it is wise, at the close of each summer season, to reflect on the shortness of life. The Scriptures represents it as a 'vapor which appeareth for a little time, and then vanisheth away.' occupation of the farmer affords abundant opportunity to study yield its fruits for the sustenance of man. God has promised that 'while the earth remaineth seed time and harvest shall not fail. If, as sometimes occurs, a hard year comes to the farmer, how it should teach him his dependence on Him who 'giveth the early and the latter rain! - Wilmington Democrat.

AN INCIDENT.

An old lady called at the bank with her book, and asked to have all her money. She had not been at the bank in nineteen years, and at that time she had a balance of five dollars only. The account, with the accumulated interest, amounted to over fourteen dollars. She seemed overcome with emotion when she found out how much was coming to her, and went back to the teller, asking him to re-deposit five dollars, as she did not wish to have so much money about her. In the conversation that followed, she told the clerk that she had passed through a great many trials, having lost her husband more than twenty years ago. For the past two or three years she has often been in extreme want—the only work she has been able to procure latterly was making button-holes. Last week she obtained some coal from the city; but on Saturday she took back the shirts she had been working on for two weeks, expecting to receive her pay, two dollars. But for some reason they would not pay her. She went home, not knowing what to do. She had eaten nothing for a day. At last she kneeled down and asked God to show her some way that she might not starve or be compelled to beg, Rising from her knees, the thought came over her to open a trunk that she had not opened for years. She hoped she might find something either to sell or pawn. On turning over its contents, she came across the bank book that I have mentioned, and which she had long since forgotten.—Christian Weekly.

IMPERIAL SOAP

IS THE BEST!

Crampton's Imperial Soap is the best.

This Soap is manufactured from pure materials; and as it contains a large percentage of Vegetine Oil, is warranted fully equal to the best imported Castile soap, and at the same time contains all the washing & cleansing properties of the celebrated German and

German and French Laundry Soaps. It is therefore recommended
for use in the Laundry, Kitchen and Bath Room, and for general household purposes; also for Printers, Painters, Engineers and
