THE KATYDID.

I love to hear thine carnest voice, Wherever thou art hid, Thou testy little dogmatist, Thou pretty Katydid ! Thou 'mindest me of gentlefolks,— Old gentlefolks are they,— Thou say'st an undisputed thing In such a solenn way. Thou art a female, Katydid ! I know it by the trill That quivers thro' thy piercing notes, So peculent and shrill. I think there is a knot of you Beneath the hollow tree,— Wherever thou art hid,

I think there is a knot of you Beneath the hollow tree,— A knot of spinster Katydids,— Do Katydids drink tea[†] Oh, tell me where did Katy live, And what did Katy do[†] And was she very fair and young, And yet so wicked too[†] Did Katy love a naughty man, Or kiss more checks than one[†] I wareaut Katy did no more

Or kiss more cheeks than one ? I warrant Katy did no more Than many a Kate has done. Dear me! Pil tell you all about My fuss with little Jane, And Ann, with whom I used to walk So often down the lane, And all that tore their locks of black, Or wet their eyes of blue,— Pray tell me, sweetest Katydid, What did poor Katy do ? Ah no! the living oak shall crash, That stood for ages still, The rock shall rend its mossy base, And thunder down the hill,

And thunder down the hill, Before the little Katydid

And thinker down iteration, Before the little Katydid Shall add one word, to tell The mystic story of the maid Whose name she knows so well. Peace to the ever-murmuring race! And when the latest one Shall fold in death her feeble wings, Beneath the autumn sun, Then shall she raise her fainting voice, And lift her drooping lid, And then the child of future years Shall learn what Katy did. _________.

THE RIGHT OF PROPERTY

George.-Come, Charles, let us go and get some peaches. Charles .- Where? There are none in our garden. G.—There are plenty in Squire Carlton's.

C .- They are not ours. G.-They will be when get them. C.-I am not so sure of that. Taking a man's property without his permission, does not make it ours.

G.-Poh! He has more than he wants, and more than he can use up. C.—Perhaps he means to sell them.

G.—Perhaps he does and per-haps doesn't. I know he can't eat them all, and I mean to help him. C.-Do you mean to say that you intend to steal the peaches ? G .- Not exactly. But I love peaches, and he has more than he wants, and would not miss a bushel if I took them. C.—You may say the same of his dollars; but would you dare to take his dollars for the same reason ? G.-Peaches are not dollars.

C.-They are property, and bring dollars.

G.-Not always. See, there they lie on the ground, thousands of them, and if we don't pick them up, somebody else will. So what harm will it do ?

C .- You have no right to do wrong because others will do it if you do not.

G.-What do you mean by wrong? If I take what another does not want, or even miss, I do no wrong. He does the wrong in keeping it from me.

C.-I don't understand it so. What nobody owns, any one may take; -what is lost, any one may take, and keep-for the owner; but what is not lost, and has an owner, cannot be taken without doing a wrong.

me any. C.—Then go without. It will not be half so hard to go with an empty stomach as with a burdened conscience. right, and there comes the Squire!

Let us go and ask him. If he doesn't give us some he will be as mean as dirt.

But the property of mean men must be respected, or the generous will have no security for theirs.

JESSIE'S ADVICE TO GRANDMA.

"What would you do if I were to be blind ?" cried grandmother, rubbing her eyes.

"I'll tell you what to do, grand-mother," said Jessie, jumping up from her playthings. "What?" asked grandma. "Go and tell Jesus," said Jessie; "that is what I would do."

"Perhaps he would not cure me," said Grandmother.

"Then He would help you to say, 'Thy will be done,' and then you would not mind it, grandma," said the little girl.—Leslie's Sunday Magazine.

Good men are always goodhumored, and men with a clean conscience and tolerably good digestion are generally in a good humor. Fat men like fun better than lean ones—a hearty laugh is apt to give a lean man a pain in the side until he gets used to laughing. That's the reason, &c.-Charlotte Democrat.

"Could we with ink the ocean fill, And were the sky a parchment made; Were every stick on carth a quill, And every man a scribe by trade; To write the love of God above, Would drain the ocean dry; Nor could the soroll contain the whole, Though stretched from sky to sky."

We have a number of letters from clever people asking us to send them boys and girls. After due deliberation we have reached the conclusion that we have not, at present, any boys or girls whom we can recommend as aqual to the requirements of the writers. But if they will come and see and talk with the children, they may make their own contracts, and mutual satisfaction

"Should deserted children be admitted," was decided in the negative.
"Should cleared children be admitted?" This was left to the discretion of the Super-intendent. When the deformity is of such a character as to require extra attention, it was thought unalvisable to admit the aparties in the present condition of the Asylum.
"Should boys learn trades at the Asylum?" Decided in the negative, it boing impracticable at this time to employ skilled mechanics in the various trades, erect suitable workshops and parchase necessary tools.
"Should collecting agents he appointed in different parts of the Superintendent; but the meeting advised against the employing and payling agents."
