MORE GOOD NEWS

Just one year ago, July 1943, the CAROMOUNT NEWS offered an editorial on "Good News". July, 1944 brings "More Good News". The progress of the Allied forces in invasions and occupations have exceeded all expectations in the far flung theaters of war. Separated by great globular distances-- yet the Allied Powers are drawn so close together by strategic coordination and increasingly greater understanding and sympathy.

There is an urge in our hearts to shout from the house tops for the great victories won. Then this urge is subdued by a realization of the sacrifices, the heart aches, the blood shed, the suspense, the lives lost, the grim realization. Yet, we receive a letter from a Caromount Service Man now in Normandy saying, "These foxholes and slit trenches get rather muddy--but we can stand that o'okay--and our spirits are boosted. In the midst of all that hell and privations, turmoil and confusion, working day end night, he finds time to write us a note. Such fortitude is the quality of Young American Manhood and Womanhood that no Nazi, nor Nipponese can successfully combat.

Yes, in the midst of all of our confusion of ideas and moods, sympathies and regrets, we still say--More Good News.

This month brings greater tragedy for individuals yet nearer peace, security, and happiness for all.
