The Editor Speaks . . .

Education is the most outstanding tool for our future development and success. We should be keenly aware of the fact that nine out of ten boys and girls now enjoy the benefits of a high school education. Many of these youths have realized the need of extending their education by going to college. Thus preparing themselves for outstanding and successful careers.

If you are doubtful of your future, Occupational Guidance is a means of helping you to decide or think about jobs that would best suit your personality. By studying this course you may learn to take advantages of opportunities that you otherwise may not be prepared to fulfill.

Qualifications of employees in all fields of work are becoming more complex than before. Employers are seeking perfection in the services obtained. Occupational Guidance again may come to your aid by helping you to realize what the employers want.

Library Notice

All students are urged to take care of the library books. Return all books on or before the date due to avoid having to pay the two-cents per day over-due fine. Return all books to the librarian's desk. Addie Winstead and Roberta Morrow have recovered quite a few books, which had been "returned", from desks in the various classrooms.

Gabbing With Gus

Well gang, how does it feel to have a long vacation. I have been away but I have been keeping tabs on you. I see that something has happened to V. S. and N. A. C. F. must have moved in. Oh that's right. W. B. and R. S. seem to have started moving smoothly. Say! S. A., what happened to you and E. C.? I have some new dope anyway. W. B., you seem to be trying to move smoothly with I. B., but watch your step my eyes are on you. I see every move. C. W., you look as if you are waking up. What about that M. L. S.? C. H., why don't you wake up and live? You stay in the cold. E. G., why don't you learn how to play it cool before you try, because you might freeze, R. B. is already putting icicles on you. D. H., what's happened since the holidays? R. B., you are going backwards instead of forward. A. B., you are really playing it cool with M. N. keep the good work up. J. A., why don't you get on the ball with M. G.? R. B., why don't you make up your mind? I know about J. G., M. D., and R. W., you can't have but one. J. F., I see you have are you trying to do to D. S. what are you trying to do to A. P.? J. B., I see you have lost F. W. and B. W. Hey, what's wrong with you C. H., don't you know W. B. still likes you? B. H., how's your trumpet player doing? I don't hear much about you and him. Well, Mr. C. E. has found someone to love B. A. C. Play it chilly boy. J. E., I believe you are in love with E. K. Is that right? G. S., don't cry I won't put your name beside that of R. B. anymore. M. A., take it easy, you know what I mean. T. B. play it cool with B. B. Hey! E. F., why don't you stop moaning over O. H. and R. S. Try to get B. H. from your friend. Well, J. C. goes with G. V. How long will that flame burn? E. C., is it true that you like E. C.? She is a nice little trick.

Looking Around L.H.S.

The bulletin board displays of the year have been unusually attractive, interesting, and educational. Have you noticed them? The classes and teachers who have been responsible for them should be highly commended. Since Christmas we have had four very fine displays.

"Dipper Full of Stars" was a beautiful display. On a blue background there was a large silver dipper overflowing with stars. Famous quotation were written on the stars.

"Penny Saved Is A Penny Earned" represented Thrift Week. A huge but beautiful piggy bank was placed on a yellow background. Real pennies appeared to be falling into the bank. Play money, a "play" bond and checks were placed around the bank.

"Fight the Common Cold" was a display of a part of a unit of work by the 5-B grade. It showed several "do's" and "don't" to avoid colds, spelling pads with words about colds, and drawings about colds.

"Winter Scenes" gave some of our artists an opportunity to show their talents. This display was composed of drawings pertaining to winter by students of the high school and elementary school.

LAUGH A LITTLE

Teacher: Joan, tell us something about oysters.

Joan: They are very lazy.

Teacher: What makes you think that?

Joan: They are always found in beds.

Mr. Smith: Milt, can you tell me one of the uses of cowhide?

Milt: Yes Sir, it holds the cow together.

POET'S NOOK

THE COMMON COLD

I hate to catch a cold,
It makes me feel so old.
My throat gets awfully sore.
I have to rest much more.
I sneeze and sneeze and sneeze!
Excuse me, if you please.
This cold has got me down,
So I just sit and frown.

LET'S MARCH AND FIGHT AGAINST POLIO

The March of Dimes is under-way.
We should try to give as much as we can today.
Let's give pennies, nickels, and dimes,
Even give up some of our gay times.
Although you miss the dollar you give,
It will help some person to live.
Let's be generous and let our spirits grow
For those who are afflicted with the germ of polio.
It may be YOU tomorrow, or the one you love most,
Or any friend, relative, or person from coast to coast.
Let us fight this disease and try to be
The true and loyal guardians of our community.

LOOKING IN

Coming home one winter night
I passed windows warm and bright.
I looked through and I could see
People snug as they could be.
Safe inside they did not know
That it was cold out in the snow.
Joseph Foushee Grade 4-B

An aviator flew in the sky
His friends exclaimed, "My, My";
The airplane fell
In a farmer's dell
Now he's gone bye, bye.
Druscilla Clark—8-A

There was an old man in a tree
He almost sat on a bee;
He looked around
And fell on the ground,
And landed right on me.
