

Guadalcanal Pic And Comedy Get Bouquets

Documentary pictures to comedy shows and then on to an excellent revival pic, makes for a good combination of entertainment at the Post Theater this week.

GUADALCANAL DIARY, Richard Trugaskis's best seller on the bloody and inspiring story of the Marine's mighty fight on historic Guadalcanal, hits the theaters tomorrow and Monday in picture form. It will not prove a choice tidbit for squeamish stomachs.

The grim and gory screen version of Trugaskis' book will be shockingly revealing. This pic has been hailed as a masterful job of celluloid reporting on one of the bravest and bloodiest pages in history. The dynamic trio of Preston Foster, Lloyd Nolan and William Bendix head the cast. Their emoting and the film, itself, is dedicated with complete humility to the United States magnificent and mighty Marines. A "must" for all action-lovers.

Nae Wynn In Musical
Tuesday will see the flicker IS EVERYBODY HAPPY with Fred Lewis and his band and Nae Wynn. We dunno about the merit of this one, as we've heard next to nothing about it, but Lewis devotees will probably get a bang out of hearing their man play his corned clarinet for the greater part of the film. As for us, fellas—That Wynn girl is a terrific singer and looker, combined. How they ever delayed putting this sasharine-like darling before the moviegoers eyes for so long is beyond us. And she is one of the outstanding warblers of the day.

YANKEE DOODLE DANDY with Jimmy Gagne, perennial scowler of the screen, Joan Leslie, All-American sweetheart, and capable Walter Huston is received on Wednesday. The tune-studded story of the life of George M. Cohan, Grand Old Man of the American stage and vaudeville, proved to be a sockeroo, smash hit on its first showing and it is still good enough entertainment for a second peek at it. Miss Leslie and Gagne make a splendid team and do full justice to the story. See it, by all means.

Comedy Hit Shows
The story about the poor little rich girl and the male Cinderella given full benefit of brilliant dialog, hilarious situations, excellent direction and unstinting production mountings in PRINCESS O'ROURKE, laugh-making comedy with Olivia DeHavilland, Bob Cummings, Charles Coburn, Jack Carson and Jane Wyman, a superior cast. Keep your ears open or you'll miss half of the laughs... but there'll still be enough to work your funny-bone overtime. Thursday and Friday are the day set for this sterling reel.

Today brings the usual double bill of movies. Allan Jones, barrel-chested tenor star, and disturbing blonde Evelyn Ankers top the cast for YOU'RE A LUCKY FELLOW. MR. SMITH, it smells. MYSTERY BROADCAST with Frankie Albertson and Ruth Terry will be beaved at the picture for the other half of the program. That's all, trowber, that's all.

Post Quiz Show Has Gags, Dough

"The Three Quiz(lings)" a new question-and-answer show presented each Wednesday night at the Service Club is packing them in these days with its many combinations of truth and consequence quizzing.

Based on the idea that people like to see other people making fools of themselves, the "Three Quiz(lings)" is a fast-paced routine of goofy questions and outrageous consequences spring on its unsuspecting victims.

Cash prizes for participating, and a Best-Actor prize of a carton of cigarettes is proffered to the luckless GIs and WACs who volunteer, and everybody ends up more than happy.

Last week, in its maiden performance, the show spotted some of the silliest gags on the books and drew plenty of laughs from both contestants and audience. After flunking their questions, two GIs were blindfolded and had to sing while feeding each other two of those super-gooey Service Club cakes.

A married soldier was blindfolded and told that two WACs and his wife would peck him on the cheek and that he had to choose his wife's kiss out of the three. He chose, all right; but was mortally surprised to find that a Master Sergeant has done the honors all three times.

Then there was the "WAC that juggled three eggs and had to mop up the resulting mess. The poor lad who had to imitate an airplane and run around the Club flapping his wings and making engine noises. One girl from the Post WAC detachment had to read Shakespeare's Romeo and Juliet dialogue to a highly amused bunch of GIs in the balcony.

All in all, the audience get up with a satisfied feeling, which was the point of the whole proceeding, sponsored and produced by AIRO-Mech through the Special Service Section, the show is a regular weekly feature.

Quartermaster Repairs Lots Of Paraphernalia

Uncle Sam, biggest shoe cobbler and general repairman in the world saved over $7,000 during the month of September through the operation of his reclamation and repair shop here on the field, according to a monthly report released today by Major Paul C. Uhlenhop, post Quartermaster.

Operated by civilian employees under the direction of an Army Service Forces officer the shop repairs anything a soldier wears from his neckties, shoes, shirts, underwear, he uses such as cartridge belts, tentage, bedding, to chairs, typewriters, tables and barracks furniture. If clothing doesn't fit when issued, it is altered.

During the month nearly 10,000 items were repaired or altered, Major Uhlenhop said. These included 7,383 pairs of shoes; 2,363 articles of clothing, textiles and miscellaneous items; 21 pieces of canvas and webbing with 208 alterations; 135 typewriters; 114 raincoats; mess kits and furniture.

"What's the matter, Joe? Don't you love me any more?"

"Sure, Mable - I'm just resting."

"Dec, I don't feel so well. I think it's my breathing."

"Alright, I'll see if I can't stop that."

HEY, SERGEANT, I wanna pass! It's the same old story. Pvt. Henderson takes her troubles to 1st Sgt. Alma Davies, of the WAC Detachment here on the field. Sgt. Davies has run up against in his working hours, but she also has quite a most of the troubles any male top-kick would be likely to few more that hardly ever come up with male GIs. Hey, Sarge, I need a new patch vulcanized in my girdle. Hey, Sarge, my permanent's simply a mess!

PASS IN REVIEW! The WACs cut a military figure in this picture as Lt. Anne Coggin, Company Commander, leads her organization before the reviewing stand at last week's presentation ceremonies. Justly proud of their drilling and choosing here, but they wouldn't trade their khaki and callisthenics. Watch those feet, fellas, they all hit the ground at the same time.

THEY'RE EITHER too large or too small. Just like their GI brothers-in-arms, these skirts have to be altered, and the blouses taken in at the sides. Here's Cpl. Ogleaby (facing camera) handing out a new set of ODs to some anxious WAC, in the Detachment's supply room. A little different from the way most of the girls used to buy clothes, there's no picking and choosing here, but they wouldn't trade their khaki for the fanciest get-ups.

IT'S MAIL CALL at the WAC detachment, and the girls flock around Cpl. Estelle Neton to get their quota of Sugar Reports. WACs in the detachment on Seymour Johnson Field hail from every section of the country. In any one day you're liable to find letters coming in with Los Angeles and New York postmarks, and mail from Arizona and Chicago. Just as in any other Army organization, the girls look forward to mail call.
