FRANCE, ANYONE?

"C'est la vie!" which means "It's the life," in French, perfectly describes my six-weeks' stay in Europe in the summer of 1966. During the trip, organized by the Foreign Language League, I studied French and took in the sights of three countries.

Our first compus was at the lycee, the French public boarding school in Etampes, forty miles southwest of Paris. During our two-weeks' stay, we took several excursions to Paris which included trips to the Eiffel Tower, The Bastille, and others. We also toured the Palace of Versailles.

French bread was served with every meal, and we had the typical breakfast of coffee and French bread with preserves. No milk! Basically, foods were about the same, but they were highly seasoned. We did eat horsemeat, snails, and yogurt.

Our second compus was located at the lycee in Antibes on the Riviera. It was not unusual to see men and women of all sizes and shapes wearing bikinis or nothing at all on the beach. It was also sometimes difficult to distinguish males from females due to their wild hairdos. During our Antibes stay we took a short trip to Rome and saw many interesting sights.

Our vacation was concluded with four days in Geneva, Switzerland.

Don't think that the whole trip was fun and games, for we had three hours of classes in the mornings in which we studied the French language and French culture, taught by natives.

Our six weeks of excitement, education, and fun ended by returning to Kennedy International Airport with valuable memories, travel experience, and the conviction that there's no place like home.
