Patience of Washington High School completed a general course in "Good Grooming." The activities of this particular unit consisted of demonstrations from various members of the class. Some of the demonstrations were: "The correct way to wash hair, how to manicure the nails, and the correct way to wash a sweater."

These were also some very interesting and stimulating reports given on "suitable dress for the high school student, and the care of the hair, skin, hands and teeth." The main objective of this unit was to arouse a greater interest in high school students about their own personal appearance. In keeping with the objective of the unit, it was quite appropriately brought to a close by competitive projects by each member of the class. This project was in the form of booklets. Prizes were given for the two best booklets, after they were evaluated by the members of the class. The booklets were evaluated on the basis of neatness, attractiveness, suitability of material, and arrangement of the material. The first award went to Miss Frances Dunston, and the second went to Miss Odessa Hunter.
