

FEPC Member Speaks To Southern Law Studes

By SAMUEL P. PERRY, JR.
 Boston, Mass. (ANP)—Southern states will have nothing to fear in federal fair employment practice legislation, "intelligently administered on a basis of reason and not upon force," Commissioner Edward S. McKenney, member of the Massachusetts FEPC, told a recent meeting of the Southern Club of the Harvard law school.

Speaking before a group of law students from below the Mason-Dixon line, McKenney declared the key to success in the administration of a national anti-discrimination law, such as will come before the next congress, will be the manner in which it is administered.

"If the person ultimately having administrative authority named is true in the south, the law can be made to operate without causing hardship to anyone," the commissioner asserted.

It was pointed out, "the same objections are now being raised in the southern states against a federal FEPC as were raised here in Massachusetts," in connection with our statute. The arguments that the proposal is "un-American" inspired by that it will lead to something more than economic equality among all races and groups have proven baseless.

Today in Massachusetts, the very interests which were most vociferous in their opposition to the statute are now among those who give it willing support, and it is my feeling the same will be true in the south.

The most effective means found to enforce anti-discrimination legislation, McKenney continued, has been the force of public opinion. "Employers who have spent millions of dollars developing favorable public opinion are not going to risk their investment making a law representing the will of the majority."

McKenney disagreed with students who said the force of public opinion must work the opposite way in the south and pointed out many of the large employers in the south are manufacturers and distributors who must make and keep friendly relations throughout the nation.

"You could not expect universal compliance with a national statute," McKenney said, "if you are interested in the progress of the country, you must have the moral acceptance of the law."

Good business in the case of higher and discrimination in employment, according to the commissioner, has been made by a group of companies, banks and state FEPC, but McKenney attacked the idea of a "big" union, but would not care to disagree publicly with the statement that all individuals have a right to employment.

MINISTERIAL GROUP SENDS YULE MESSAGE

R. Irving Boone, President Friends One and All:

Again by the grace of God, we approach the blessed Day, commemorating the birth of the Babe of Bethlehem—the world's Saviour. May we come up to this glad occasion with a full understanding and appreciation of its importance and with grateful hearts to Almighty God, who has moved the world and HE gave His only-begotten Son.

When Jesus was born in Bethlehem, our every hope for our selves and our loved ones became a vital, efficient and lively expression of the love and mercy of God for each of us and for all of the people of our earth.

For the last season when God's love was made manifest in GIVING, we have seen the love of God made manifest in the hearts of those who have given.

His gift to us, may we dedicate our lives to the high task of the redemption of the human race, and in this, may we be inspired by the love of God, and thus, may we help to bring to the world the peace of "peace and goodwill" heralded by the angels on that first Christmas night, and may we become, in our own hearts, the SEASONS' GREETINGS.

BOLIVIA HAPPENINGS

Old time winter made his appearance around Santa Bolivia last week end. Not many Dimes were present to greet him. Dimes were crowded Saturday with people in line to see for Christmas, the loss of the weather. The Sunday many remained by the fire, and chatted away.

December brought joy to Mrs. Catherine Green, I. C. Hankins and Alex Hayes who were given a surprise party Monday night at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Lee Brown. The party was very gay, the food excellent and the decorations were in accord with the theme of the month of December. The guests enjoyed the party as much as the ones for whom the party was given.

Mr. Cheryl Bryant spent Sunday with his relatives.

Mr. G. W. Fink is home for the Yuletide season.

Mr. and Mrs. C. J. Hankins have closed their school doors until the holidays are over. They teach in the western part of the state.

Mrs. Lucia Hankins has returned from New York City where she has been to the bedside of her brother, and in a few days is recovering.

Mrs. Corie Brown and Mrs. Cleo P. Livingston who was on the sick list are doing nicely now.

The NAACP will sponsor a Christmas Program Monday night, December 27, at Piney Grove School at 7:30. We are expecting a full house—bring your friends along.

A community Christmas tree will be sponsored by patrons of South Bazaar. Come and bring your gift. The tree will be posted

DIXIECRATS SET UP WASHINGTON LOBBY

BIRMINGHAM (ANP)—A state's rights institute will be set up in Washington to provide a "check on the trend toward centralization, state socialism and dictatorship," it was announced here last week. The establishment of the institute was ordered by States' Rights party leaders meeting at the Tutwiler hotel and will be headed by Gov. Ben Laney of Arkansas.

Purpose of the organization will be to seek to "preserve the reserve powers of states and the rights of the sovereign people of each state to self-government." The leaders concluded that the organization was needed because "the social and economic atmosphere in which our liberties and grandfathers lived and prospered is under attack."

Only half of the original 16-man party committee was present at
