The Fayetteville Military Hospital is scheduled to open its doors to the general public some time in the near future.

The idea for a hospital came from Dr. M. L. Perry, one of the city's leading physicians. Being a practicing physician, the doctor is in a better position to see and know the need of such a hospital.

He saw the need for one and started to do something about it. He purchased the old Bradford home on Moore Street, renovated it and built a modern hospital in addition.

The organization has been projected the hospital out of the blue with a new name, Fayetteville Military Hospital.

They have done a wonderful job, every person in the city and surrounding territories should be proud.

But the job has not ended. There is still work to be done. The building needs equipment. This is where all of us can show our appreciation.

We can make a liberal contribution to this hospital. Several white business firms and organizations have made contributions to them.

When the doors open for business on people will benefit directly from it. We will have our own hospital. We will give more jobs to our people.

And above all our people will be taken from the dark and stifling wards, exposed to the eye of the shining sun.

Every man and woman, every organization should exert every ounce of energy they possess to see that the hospital is properly equipped.

One job is now and always will be to pull together. It is more than a motto. It is a way of life. It is a goal.

And only by pulling together in what you do, but more importantly, what you do not do, can we hope to win.

Follow citizens, we need the hospital. With equal mind, the tax and the effort, the working institution to give us the best possible equipment.

It is time for a new way of thinking. It is time for a new way of living.

NATIONAL GUARD TRAINING OPEN TO RADIO AMATEURS

Amateur radio operators — "radio hams" — may now gain new experience and training in the National Guard as members of the Military Amateur Radio System (MARS).

Membership in the National Guard MARS — part of the recently authorized service-wide system which will establish amateur radio networks in the Army, Air Force, the Air and Army National Guard, Organized Reserve Corps, and ROTC — is open to any Guardsman or recruit who possesses an amateur radio operator license.

Under the plan, operations of National Guard MARS will be part of the regular training programs for National Guard communications units and personnel. Equipment for MARS stations, which may be established at any of the Guard Armories or Air Bases, would be supplied by the United States Army and Air Force where necessary.

MARS activities would be in addition to regular weekly armory training of the National Guard and purely in a voluntary basis.

The MARS program should be a important factor in providing a reservoir of trained and qualified radio operators and maintenance men for the new National Guard.

Major General Kenneth F. Crumley, chief of the National Guard Bureau, said:

Amateur radio operators interested in participating in the MARS program and who can qualify for membership in the National Guard contact the Adjutant General at their State or Army National Guard armory.
