TEXAS NEWSPAPERS MARK 56TH YEAR

HOUSTON, Tex. (AP) — This week The Texas Informer and Freeman published in Houston is observing its 56th birthday. This newspaper at 56 is one of the nation's oldest Negro newspapers.

It is the result of the merger of two famous old Texas newspapers. The Informer and the Texas Freeman. The Freeman was founded in 1893 and The Informer some years later.

Carter W. Wesley and J. A. Atkins, publishers, first bought The Informer in 1927 from C. F. Richardson. In 1930 they bought the Texas Freeman and combined the two into what is popularly known as the Informer.

Today the Informer enterprises is the largest Negro business in the southwest. It hires more than 70 persons in its home plant. At the same time it runs three other newspapers, the Dallas Express, the New Orleans Informer, Sentinel and the Shreveport (La.) Informer-Sentinel.
