YOUR SCRIBE

By FREDRICK L. BURNS

In a few weeks the schools of the city and state will open their doors for the next school term.

As these doors open, asking the young school lad to come back to complete his or her education, there will be a few that will not heed the bid. To these few this article is directed.

An education is one of the few things of which you cannot be deprived. You are always adding something new.

We are living in an age that requires an education to exist.

It seems rather strange to see persons now who can't write his or her name. These things actually exist here, in a city that boasts of one of the largest elementary schools and teacher training colleges in the state.

The time is not far off when at least a high school education is required to become a janitor, a practical nurse, a cook, a maid and practically to do any domestic work. Only a few years ago a young teen age girl could get a job as a nurse, caring for the young children. A young boy could get a job as a janitor or chauffeur. Today you have a different story, most buildings requiring a janitor have installed heating units which require some knowledge to operate. They have air-conditioning units which require gauge readings. All this requires an education beyond grade school.

Intelligent families will not hire persons to nurse their infants unless they can make formulas and when they grow older, teach them to read and write.

In order to walk into any paying job a person must be trained to fill that job, and to get that training one must stay in school.

Too many of our young boys and girls get the idea that when they finish elementary and high school they know everything, and that they have learned enough. The problem, as most of our parents

To stay in school may create a problem, so most of our parents may not be in the position to work in order to keep our children in school.

Then, too, there must be some initiative on the part of the individual to want to stay in school.

By all means please stay in school as the race needs more and more trained persons to take the torch when the present leaders step out of the picture.

Young men and young women, if you are planning to stop school and go to work, remember you may get a job paying a fair salary now. But, what are you going to do when someone else has been trained to take your job?

Forget the idea and go back to school and get that much needed training—now.

Cooperates With FEPC

PHILADELPHIA, Pa. (NIPS)—According to a recent statement by the Executive Director of the Philadelphia FEPC Commission, a project to have employers comply with Commission regulations regarding employment application forms and pre-employment inquiries has the full cooperation of the local Chamber of Commerce.

Dr. Frank Loescher, Commission head, stated that the Chamber forwarded to its 2100 members a list of lawful and unlawful pre-employment inquiries as per the interpretations of the Commission. Additionally the Chamber invited its members to submit their current forms for review.

As a result of this support, Loescher advised, contact with trade organizations and business associations is being established with a view toward securing the same type of cooperation. It was revealed that most of these groups have already agreed to distribute FEPC literature among their memberships.

A total of 423 North Carolina farmers have entered the 200-bushel corn contest for 1949, according to Dr. E. R. Collins, in charge of agronomy for the State College Extension Service.

The second annual Carolinian Yam Festival will be held in Tarboro City on October 13, 14, and 15.

LOUISA'S LETTER

Dear Louisa:

We are two girls of sixteen. We both go out with boys but we don't go with them over a month at a time because there are two girls about our same age who try to take them from us.

After they get us turned against the boys, then they don't care anything about them. They do the same thing every time.

What would you do about it? "Our Sincere Thanks"—VA.

Answer:

"Well, it seems to me that by now you should know how they work and refuse to listen to them when they try to turn you from your current friends. There is some excuse for being fooled the first time but it is your own fault if you fall for the same tricks twice.

LOUISA

Dear Louisa:

I am a girl of 14 years. I want your opinion about a problem of mine.

My parents aren't old but they seem old-fashioned about girls and boys mixing together and having a good time. I may be too young to date regularly but don't you think it's okay for me to date once or twice on a weekend. I'll be 15 in October.

I tell my mother she had a good time when she was a girl and yet she hardly wants me to look at a boy.

It sounds silly when the boys ask me for a date, say I can't date, I am just about the only girl in town that doesn't date.

BROWN EYES—VA.

Answer:

I think it would be all right if your mother would let you date on the weekend. That is, of course, if she knows the boy you are going with, where you are going and knows that you will come home at a proper hour. Ask her to try you for a week or two and when she sees that you can be depended upon perhaps she will change her mind about no dates.

It may be that would rather you "double-date"—that is, go out with your friend and another couple.

HEALTH & BEAUTY

By DR. SOPHIA BRUNSON
Fatigue a Cause of Depression

Most of us who become thoroughly discouraged are not in good condition physically. No one is himself when fatigued. His intellectual faculties are not normal.

The people who have been successful in life are not as a rule those with the most brilliant intellects, but those who do not easily give up to discouragement. They go on and on in spite of apparent failure. When they face a stone wall, they either go around it or blast a passage through it. Victory and success do not often come to the quitter, but to the patient worker who like the potter turns defeat into victory by not giving way to discouragement.

Good health is the first prerequisite of a successful life. If a person is well he can drive himself hard up to a certain point, but he should not allow himself to grow so tired each day that his body does not become rested during the night. If he does that, he injures himself by accumulated fatigue. While in this state the health suffers and the morale is so broken that he gives way to the depression and discouragement which the condition engenders.

It is at such times that will-power is weak and many foolish deeds are committed and errors made that would have been deemed impossible at other times.

When one is fatigued and discouraged the feelings are most sensitive. Sights are imagined where none are meant and the quick retort leaps to the lips to be repented of later.
