

HIGH POINT

CURRENT CYCLE

By C. E. Yokely

DRAMA — The local Community Radio Council is giving to High Point radio listeners some of its best drama via the local airways since the inception of this progressive community organization.

The present series of broadcasts is concerned with the History of High Point. The script last week entitled "CROSSROADS" dealt with the laying of the North Carolina Railroad through our present city of High Point — then just a place where the plank road met with what was then a real choo-choo line.

Like the history of all America the Negro was there. Although it is hard for some of us to appreciate the part played in some instances — that nevertheless does not change the historic significance of these undeniable contributions. In CROSSROADS Camp Friend, local young Negro who possess a commendable tenor voice played the part of the coachdriver. Mr. Friend himself knew the average reaction to some of the lines and voice inflection he acquired in the skit.

For the sake of historical recognition of the fact that the town's development was the Negroes' development and for the dramatic ability shown by the hillbillies, earlier Quakers and awe-inspiring backwoodsmen dramatization, the Radio Council has discovered a way to use people's talent in the reenactment of movements of people and there is an opportunity to continue to use these people for other talent skits on local programs for the sake of allowing all the people to appreciate the other developments of the people.

DEMOCRACY — "To Make the World Safe For Democracy" was the clarion call of the late Woodrow Wilson who through his congress called Americans to World War I. The Armistice Day parade here would remind one of that phrase of Wilson as we saw all groups in the community representing what they represent, Veterans and all marching in the parade.

Significant about the parade was the fact that each group was marshalled at various intervals of the passing parade. There was no group section other than for what they represented and not who they were or from what section of the community they came to pay tribute to their faith then in DEMOCRACY and the faith they still have. Such marches will no doubt keep DEMOCRACY marching on to the ideal of World War I for which the world still thirsts.

LOCAL AREAS AID SCHOOL LUNCH PROGRAM

Many local communities are producing and conserving food to supplement the School Lunch Program, according to reports received by the U. S. Department of Agriculture.

For example, in Caddo Parish, Louisiana, all five of the schools teaching vocational agriculture raise truck crops and hogs which are processed at the Lucas training school near Shreveport and divided among the 83 schools in the parish.

Extension Agent B. D. Harrison cooperates with the vocational agriculture teachers in carrying out this project on five and 10-acre plots near the vocational schools.

James Metrick, principal of the Lucas school, directs the processing of fruits, vegetable, and meats for the school lunch program.

Partly as a result of the local food production and preservation programs in Louisiana and other States, the number of youngsters being served lunches has increased. Reports show that nearly seven million children in 43,000 schools received lunches last year. This represented a 15.9 percent increase over the previous year.

Louisiana led the Nation in the percentage of youngsters served. While for the country as a whole, only 25.8 percent of the school children received lunches under the program, in Louisiana, 54.5 percent of the youngsters were served. That State contributed $6,500,000 to its School Lunch Program.
