rell, Freddie Mac Bridges, Linda Goodson, and Linda Jones. The ushers were: James (Bunny) Evans, Joseph Freeman, Thomas Jones, Johnny Prince Williams, Marvin and Metern Whitley, William Alston, Robert Lilly, Samuel Spencer and Ernest McDowell.

Students Art Work On Exhibit At NC College

DURHAM—Fifty seven student art works are currently on exhibit for the general public on Friday and Saturday of each week in Room 206 of the Music and Fine Arts Building at North Carolina College. The hours are from 2 p.m. to 6 p.m.

Ceramics, design, drawing, painting, and sculpture are included in the work on display. The works will be available for public inspection through May 29. The prize winning exhibits are among the collection. One is an oil painting, "Brant Street", first prize in oils at the 1952 State Fair in Raleigh. It was painted by Miss Mercedes Barnes, NCC art major, who is now teaching in Clinton. "Brant Street" is being exhibited today through the courtesy of Dr. Sing Nan-Fen, professor of education, who owns the work.

Two other works on exhibit, a painting and a ceramic pot, by Miss Patsy Phelps, Roxboro senior art major, won prizes at the 1953 state fair. Miss Phelps' work and all of the other art on display were completed during the present school year under the direction of Edward N. Wilson, acting chairman of the art department, and W. B. Fletcher, the instructor in ceramics.

Two of the features of the exhibit are ceramic vases made by Miss Kathe Nixon, blind history major from Wilmington.

Prof. Wilson, who is completing several sculptured figures in stone, wood, and plaster under a Carnegie Research Grant, says this year marks the first time the college has sponsored an all-student exhibit. Prof. Fletcher recently completed a Carnegie Research grant that permitted him to study first hand some of the ancient pottery of the Zapotec Indians in Mexico.

The students whose works are on display are, in addition to Miss Phelps and Miss Nixon, Laurence Dunn, Henry Davis, William Lowe, Dollis Moore, Harry Moore, Kitrell Pipkin, Leon Arnold, Althea James, Mary McBane, Savannah Mitchell, and Frederick Wilkins.

RAINFALL AND SOIL MOISTURE

Weekly rainfall was reported by weathermen reporters as mostly ample. Excessive amounts were limited mostly to southern Piedmont and southeastern sections. Soils were too wet for general outdoor activity in rather wide sections of the southern Piedmont and in southeastern sections of the state. Wet soil conditions were mostly of a local nature outside of these two areas.
