

Farm Cleric Vows To Keep Going With God's Help

Bi-Racial Farmers Will Stay

WASHINGTON, D. C. (AP)—Despite bitter, heated, and cross-burned attacks, the minister of the inter-racial Georgia Farm near Americus, Ga., last week told newsmen that in the help of God he hopes to keep the communal farm operating.

At the same time he said other Georgia ministers would protect the farm from any violence that might be directed against it.

Rev. Jordan declared that he and other persons on the farm would under the constant threat of being "beat, terrorized, and killed."

College Choir To Be On Television In Mexico

NEW YORK — Sponsored by the American Embassy and the Mexican American Institute, the choir of Wiley College, Marshall, Texas, will be presented on television and in concert during a two-week tour of Mexico.

The choir will make its Mexican debut at the famed Bellas Artes Theatre in Mexico City, Saturday evening, April 20. A special performance will be given for Mexico's President.

Widows Of Veterans Fail To Apply For More Money

CLEVELAND, O. — (AP)—Widows of veterans who died of service-connected causes may apply to the Veterans Administration for increased benefits under a law which went into effect on January 1. (P. L. 851, 84th Congress, Servicemen's and Veterans' Survivors Benefits Act.)

According to the Veterans Administration, however, as of the middle of March, three out of every five widows who are eligible for the increase have failed to apply for it.

The V. A. states that applications have been sent out but that most of the widows have failed to fill them out and return them. If you know anyone who may benefit from this would you please pass this word along to them. Any widow of a veteran who feels she may be eligible for such an increase could check with the Cleveland V. A. Office in the Cuyahoga Building.

Sixth Graders Reap Happiness With 4-Page Class Newspaper

NEW YORK — A little 4-page newspaper, priced at 5 cents a copy and put out by a group of 11-year-olds, reaped one of the happiest contributions to reach the United Negro College Fund's 14th annual appeal.

Not content with working on a plan to support foreign relief, Class 6-1 of Public School 99, the Bronx, voted also to "help people within our own borders." Their history lessons had made them aware of great Negro leaders and of the people of Montgomery, Ala.

In their own way they felt it important that they help Negroes who are seeking achievement and enlightenment in the face of great odds. They thought the United Negro College Fund was ideal for relaying their message.

Mrs. Edith Wilner, teacher of the class, suggested a newspaper that could be sold to other classes at P. S. 99. Thus, "Junior Journal" was born. It was dedicated to "all fighters for freedom," poems, historical sketches, news stories, illustrations, questions and answers and interviews were included in the paper. "Junior Journal" was sold to students' parents and neighbors.

In her letter to the UNCF, with a $7.50 check, Mrs. Wilner wrote, "I wish you could have seen the enthusiasm and pride that shone from their faces when they counted the pennies, nickels and dimes. We hope the small sum we are enclosing will in some way help in your great undertaking."

Lee Hastings Bristol, national campaign chairman of the 14th annual appeal, was also enthusiastic and proud. In a letter to the youngsters, he said, "We are happy over your interest in your fellow Americans, and in people in need -- wherever they happen to be."
