Keep Small Fry Happy with Quiz Games and Frequent Stops

A vacation-bound family ready to leave as the planning of a vacation trip than just having soon as Dad takes the starting picture and packs the car serviced. They'll start early, stop early and the baggage. This family believes there's more to play group participation games to pass the time.

FLINT, MICH. — Does your family play the "Alphabet Game"?

If not, it's high time you taught them, particularly if you're planning a long automobile trip this summer. "Alphabet" ranks right along with "When I Get Home I'm Going to Write a Letter to..." and "I'm Thinking of an Animal with Six Letters" as excellent pastimes for the kids when the monotony of driving sets in. And, besides, they don't put any extra strain on the driver.

The three games are among suggestions offered by E. D. Burkhardt, manager of Buick's customer drive-away department, as helpful hints to vacation motorists.

"There's a lot more to a summer vacation trip than having the car serviced, packing some bags and loading the kids into the car," says Burkhardt, who annually offers advice to thousands of drivers who take delivery of new Buicks at Flint headquarters of the big automobile manufacturing company.

"There's not a man alive who hasn't been annoyed on a trip by children scuffling in the back seat, demanding a drink, asking every five minutes 'how soon do we get there?' or a dozen other things. Burkhardt doesn't promise complete relief, but his ideas have considerable merit.

For instance, he suggests taking along a small portable icebox with an assortment of soft drinks and a box of cookies for snacking purposes. Also a washrag and towels for clean-ups. And, if the kids are small, a plastic bag of unbreakable toys.

He suggests, too, frequent rest stops, every 100 miles or two hours, whichever comes first. They should be at a filling station, if possible, and if you're embarrassed about using the facilities, arrange so you'll need gasoline each time you stop.

"Get the kids out and let them walk around," he says. "And the driver should do the same to stretch his own legs and rest his back. When you get back in, change the riding arrangement to help break the monotony."

Burkhardt advises an early start in the morning and an early stop at night. Start looking for lodging not much later than 4 p.m. and certainly find one by 5 p.m. Gives the kids time to play around before dinner. Be in bed a little after dark, and that includes adults, too.

"If you can get along without coffee for an hour in the morning, take off early and drive for an hour before stopping for breakfast," he says. "The children will be drowsy and you can cover some miles in light traffic without any strain at all."

Obviously you shouldn't try to cover too much ground in any one day. If your car has DYNAFLOW transmission and power steering and brakes, you can cover as much as 500 miles in a day. Maybe a bit more, if you're using turnpikes most of the time. But if you're in the mountains or on narrow roads, cut it down considerably.

"A good rule-of-thumb is to limit your actual driving time to a maximum of eight hours a day," Burkhardt recommends. "That doesn't include stops for meals, leg-stretching or what have you. Just the actual time you're in the car."

When you're having your car serviced before leaving home, pick up some road maps and study out your route. Just because you know how to get to the nearest big city is no reason you know how to get out of it on the other side. A series of marked maps of the states you'll cover is handy and can save you the frustrating experience of retracing your route.

And what about the games? "Alphabet" involves keeping an eye out for roadside signs. The object is to find a word starting with "A," "B," and so on. Covers a lot of miles, especially when you get down to "Q," "X" and the like. In "Letter" the recipient's initials are used. Of course, it has to be someone the entire family knows. There are a lot of variations to this one, obviously. So are there to "Animal," one of which is to name three animals—or anything else—starting with each letter of the alphabet.

"If you can keep the kids contented, you're almost assured of a pleasant trip," adds Burkhardt. "Modern cars and modern highways—plus observance of the safety rules—take care of virtually everything else."

Vault To Resist Nuclear Blast

Resistance of a bank vault to a nuclear blast will be tested at the U. S. Atomic Energy Commission's Nevada test site this spring, in cooperation with the Federal Civil Defense Commission. The structure to be tested consists of a specially-engineered, steel-lined concrete vault sealed by a reinforced Mosler Safe Company 10-inch thick "Century" vault door. Although a Mosler vault withstood the first atomic blast at Hiroshima, Mosler feels "there is a need for better information on the resistance of protective equipment which can be obtained under the more precise and controlled conditions of a nuclear test."

STRENGTH FOR THESE DAYS
From the Bible
Therefore if any man be in Christ, he is a new creature; old things are passed away; behold, all things are become new.—(II Corinthians 5, 17.)
Through our Savior and Redeemer, Lord Jesus Christ, in real repentance we can receive God's forgiveness and tender mercy. In that moment, in His strength, we become in truth a "new man" completely—leaving behind the shame and sins of the past.

MARRIAGES

WHITEHEAD-SMITH YOWS

Announcement was made here this week of the marriage of Miss Betty V. Smith to R. D. Whitehead, Jr. in Philadelphia, Pa.

The marriage ceremony took place in the Vespertine Memorial Baptist Church of Philadelphia on April 27th.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Woodrow Smith of this city.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride was attended by her friend, Miss Geraldine Strand.

Ralph Whitehead, brother of the groom, served as best man.

Following the ceremony, the groom's parents and Mrs. Helen Terrell, aunt of the bride, were associate hosts at a reception in their home on 4th Street.
