Doggett, Domino, Presley Rate As Tops With GI's

CHICAGO (AP)— Rock and roll music has not only captivated a huge segment of the teen-aged and juvenile market in America, but is seemingly manifesting itself in the hearts, souls and dancing shoes of American soldiers stationed overseas.

This much was evidenced last week here from reports that the best selling record artists among GI's stationed overseas included Bill Doggett, Fats Domino and Elvis Presley.

Other favorite record makers were from Sinatra, Perry Como, Joni James, Bill Haley and Ella Fitzgerald.

A recent estimate of record sales to servicemen revealed that GI's spend between five and six million dollars at Army and Air Force overseas post exchange for records and tapes from the states. Of this amount, more than 60 per cent is spent for LP albums.

However, and ironically enough, was discovered that 30 per cent of albums sold to servicemen overseas were of a classical nature and only 20 per cent were jazz.

Bill Doggett's albums were in such demand that a major record company in the states has announced it will ship a generous supply of his latest albums overseas.

Hear 'Dolly King' To Become First Tan Big League Umpire

NEW YORK (AP)— Will Williams, Dolly King, former Long Island University star, be the first Negro umpire to make the big leagues?

That is a far-reaching question but if King's popularity with college officials and baseball scouts is an indication, there is a good bet that he will make the grade.

A ranking umpire in college baseball circles, King last week was singled out for praise at a dinner of the Metropolitan college umpires at the Commodore Hotel.

The praise came from the president of the group, who lauded him for his handling of assignments during the season.

He also disclosed that scouts favoring King's work and they from the leagues had been followed by him. Of course, advancement in this field means assignment to minor leagues for experience, but with a firm grounding in the college circuit, which also gets attention from baseball scouts, King has better than a good chance for selection.

Already he has been selected for the staff of basketball officials to handle games in the exclusive and elite Ivy League next season.

King has come up through the ranks as an official of the court game, starting as a trainee in a school especially designed to train competent officials. That was four years ago. In the intervening years, King worked with the local high school teams, moving up each year until he was handling games for colleges in the Metropolitan area not members of the Ivy League but under Collegiate athletic supervision.

His selection for the choice spots in officiating was made after the former LIU star had worked 45 games this year under the watchful eye of supervisors. A letter from the chairman of the officiating board welcomed King to the staff fourteen regular officials and although he has been assigned to colleges he handles will be announced later.

The Ivy League is composed of outstanding colleges in the East, Harvard, Yale, Princeton, Brown, Pennsylvania, Columbia among them. For the past seven years, King has been recreational director at the Riverton, the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company's $10,000,000 housing project in Harlem.

Sad Sam Suffers Two Injuries

CINCINNATI, OHIO (AP)— A double injury, suffered in a recent game with the Cincinnati Reds here, has put St. Louis Cardinals pitcher "Sad Sam" Jones on the shelf.

The hard-luck pitcher twisted his left knee during the third inning, and was struck on the wrist by one of Warren Hacker's offerings in the fourth frame of the game won by the Cardinals, 9 to 6. However, Jones was leading Hacker in mound duel, 2 to 1, before the wrist injury.

He was later sent to St. Louis for X-rays, where it was determined that he was suffering from a dislocation of fibula, a small bone of the left leg at the knee.

Once teammates when both played for the Chicago Cubs, Jones and Hacker were obviously engaging in a "dusting off" duel. At one point umpire Fred Hutchinson called both managers to issue a warning.

Jones was to be out the lineup for about 10 days.
