

WHERE 20 DIED—The highway near Fayetteville, N. C. took on the appearance of a battlefield recently after the crash of a truck carrying Negro and Mexican migratory farm workers, and a huge trailer. Eighteen of the workers died instantly, and two more in the hospital. (News-press Photo).

This request comes from a reader who lives in South Euclid, Ohio. She has been reading "Garden Time" in the "Cherokee Scout" and tells me that Murphy is to be her future home.

Her question: "Can you tell me if the European White Birch will grow in that area? We have grown a beauty here and I know I shall miss it." While the River Birch, Sweet Birch and Yellow Birch are more commonly grown in North Carolina, I am suggesting that she try the European type.

We are quite fortunate that many of the trees which are considered northern types will grow here because the altitude helps in some of our mountain country compensate for latitude in the northern states.

Now, in Polly Bergen's home, light levels can be adjusted to create moods to suit the occasion—just as in the theater. This newest development in gradual lighting is Luxtrol lamp control, a portable light control for individual lamps.

A pointer dial rotates smoothly at finger touch, flooding a room section with light. While entertaining, lights can be dimmed for conversation or relaxing or they can be brightened for reading, games and other seeing tasks.
