

Travel Light With Leather

Family vacations can be complicated by the disputes over what should be taken along. There'll be less conflict as well as less confusion if every member of the family is provided with his own luggage.

Temper will be spared, too, if this luggage is sturdy enough to take all that the family—and sundry porters, taxi drivers—can do to it. Take a tip from seasoned travelers, then, and pack up in the new lightweight leather luggage that's as light as any other luggage yet retains all leather's well-known puncture and tear resistance. Leather is flexible, too, and will always take that last item your eye lights on just as you snap the lock.

New this year is luggage of brushed leather. This is leather that has been finished on the flesh side, producing a soft-resistant finish. The smooth grain side of the leather becomes the lining of the bag.

In packing, put all odd-shaped things—shoes, extra handbags, cases, etc.—on the bottom, and fill in the spaces between with soft, crushable items such as stockings, T-shirts and dresses and socks on top. When you want to get to things on the bottom, you can pick up a bottom corner of this top layer and lift it out without disturbing things. In fact, you may want to put a sheet of cellophane between layers to make this even easier.

This system gives you the full length and width of the suitcase for garments, and thus saves creases. Always be sure labels, collars and waist-front lie smoothly. Fold garments with sleeves smoothed back against the front. Suits, if more than one, should be folded back equally on both sides, or then lie hem-hip in the case with a fold at the hip. For Mom, a 24-inch leather wardrobe case that weighs only five pounds will provide ample room for a half-dozen dresses as well as for shoes and all the other things that go with them.

Pop will get along nicely with an airplane leather two-suitcase of the same weight. The flexible leather sides will allow him to carry a suit, sports jacket and 4 or 5 pairs of slacks without wrinkling, still leaving room enough for sports shirts, shorts, ties, shoes, etc.

For added convenience, both Mom and Pop should take along a small earlier train case which, in addition to containing her beauty preparations and his shaving equipment, will leave space for such overnight essentials as pajamas, a fresh set of underwear and a blouse or shirt. These are useful whether you travel by car or train for times when you don't want to delve into the large cases.

Junior will need more luggage than either of his parents because he needs more changes of clothes. He should have two 21-inch suitcases, of flexible leather that will "give" and allow room for the new possessions he'll accumulate en route.

Supreme Court Frees Man Under Death Sentence Because Cops Waited Too Long To Arraign Him

WASHINGTON (AP)—A man who was facing a death sentence for alleged rape of a white woman in the District of Columbia was freed by the United States Supreme Court Monday.

The death penalty imposed on Andrew J. Mallory, convicted for rape of Mrs. Stella O'Keefe, was reversed by the high tribunal because of "extended delay" by police in arraigning him after arrest. The unanimous opinion delivered by Mr. Justice Frankfurter stated that they could not sanction the long delay between time of arrest and arraignment.

Mallory was arrested early one afternoon and was not arraigned until the following morning. This long lapse of time, said the Justices, resulted in a confession by Mallory.

Mallory and his two nephews were arrested around 2:30 one afternoon in April, 1954 on a charge of the rape of Mrs. O'Keefe in the basement of a house on Twelfth Street.

The three agreed to take lie detector tests. The nephews took theirs first. Police said Mallory admitted around 9:30 that he was guilty of the charge. He dictated a confession and was arraigned the next morning. The alleged confession was used as evidence against him.

As a result of this case Assistant Attorney General Warren Olney III, United States Attorney Oliver Gasch and others urged enactment of a clarifying law to spell out how long prisoners can be held before arraignment.

The Uniform Arrest Act requires police to bring a prisoner before a committing magistrate within 24 hours, excluding Sundays and holidays, unless a judge authorizes an extension for a maximum of another 48 hours.

This ruling by the high court is a very important one, in as much as District police have been charged in a number of pending cases with wringing confessions out of prisoners through coercion. Some times prisoners claim they signed confessions as a result of weariness due to long hours of questioning, sometimes for the want of food or water and sometimes from beatings. These confessions are often used to convict them.
