

COURT INDICTS KASPER — While his attorney, Montague Ross (right), scowls with displeasure, lanky segregationist John Kasper hears himself indicted by a Nashville, Tenn. General Sessions court on the charge of inciting to riot. Kasper addressed a mob in Nashville the night before a $500,000 public school was dynamited as a protest against integration. School Officials, Not Politicians, Must Handle Integration, Says Louisville, Ky. Superintendent

LOUISVILLE — Dr. Omer Carmichael, Superintendent of Schools in Louisville, Ky., said that to make integration work, school officials must accept the responsibility handed them by the courts and that politicians must stay out of the picture.

In an exclusive interview recently on the CBS Radio news program "The World Tonight", Dr. Carmichael, who heads the Louisville school system now in its second year of integrated classes, said: "We are beginning this fall just where we left off last spring with no accidents to give us any trouble at all."

Asked by CBS Newsman Bill Spaul of WHAS, Louisville, what is the cardinal lesson of the Louisville experience, Dr. Carmichael said: "My own belief is that there are few things which are fundamental to real success in this problem. First, that superintendents of schools and local boards of education take the responsibility which the (Supreme) court decision placed on them, and second, that politicians stay out of the picture and that the legally constituted state and local authorities support the schools in whatever program they develop."

The interview with Dr. Carmichael was part of an integration roundup from areas where it is working successfully. It also included a report by CBS Newsman

Future Looks Bright For N. C. Poultrymen

A ray of sunshine is seen on the horizon for poultry producers. An expert says egg prices are likely to rise more this fall than usual, then continue at profitable levels through the coming year.

Clayton Libeau, egg marketing specialist for the N. C. Agricultural Extension Service College, declares smaller laying flocks, reduced egg production and higher prices are in the picture for next year's poultrymen. Libeau points out that American farmers are raising an estimated 394 million young chickens this year—18 per cent less than last. This figure does not, however, include commercial broiler production. George Thurston who reported from his post in Tallahassee, Fla., that in the deep South most polls indicate that "about one fourth of all white southerners approve the Supreme Court opinion or would accept it even though they dislike it."

All sections of the country cutting production of chickens for laying flock replacements, according to Libeau. The decrease is greatest on farms with small flocks. By the first of next year, declares Libeau, the U.S. laying flock is expected to be at least 7 per cent smaller than a year earlier. Average rate of lay is expected to be up but total production may fall as much as 5 per cent below last year's levels.

Smaller production plus increase in housewife buying power should mean higher incomes and prices for egg producers.
