Rose Morgan Louis Predicts "Beauty Parlor In Each Home"

Largest Crowds Ever Expected To Attend Tar Heel State Fair

NEW YORK (AP) — One of New York's better-known personalities, the vivacious Rose Morgan Louis, fresh and rested from her vacation, talked at length about beauty to Mrs. Morgan, the beauty to Mrs. Morgan, she believes it can also be a simple one. A woman need only spend a few minutes daily to see that she is properly groomed at all times. Well coiffured hair, tasteful make-up, with eye shadow always for the evening; soft, manicured hands, and properly chosen shoes, to her, all help to make the attractive woman. As to jewelry, Mrs. Morgan feels that it should be in keeping with the occasion, appropriate and unostentatious.

The day will come, says the chic stylist, when every woman will reach for a home kit and serve as her own beauty operator. She believes this revolutionary approach to beauty culture will represent a new dimension in conserving time, and making for convenience.

On Tuesday, October 15, at 10 a.m., the North Carolina State Fair will again open the door for its five-day run through the 19th, and what is expected will be the largest crowds ever yet to attend a Fair here will begin streaming through its gates.

In keeping with the tradition established with the first fairs, only the finest of its kind in every field will be presented for their enjoyment, education and entertainment at this 104-year-old event.

Thrills, excitement, marvelous educational exhibits, beauty, pageantry and even monkey shames combine to make this year's presentations something to write home about.

Titled "North Carolina's Salute to TV," the Arcna show, from the famous MC Jack Durant to the accompanying orchestra will bring a glittering array of stars to parade their talents nightly.

"If variety is what you want," states Dr. J. S. Dorton, veteran manager of the Fair, "we have it. In my 20 years as manager, I have never seen assembled for one five-day run such high-priced, top quality entertainment."

Headliners for Tuesday and Wednesday nights are Julius LaRosa, Carmel Quinn and the Johnny Long Band, Julie, who was batted publicly from the Arthur Godfrey show, went out to prove himself and in a short time sky-rocketed.
