—Steward is claiming self-defense in the shooting, and he will be given a preliminary hearing in City Court as soon as he is physically able to face trial.
Just two weeks ago 70-year-old Samuel Clay was kicked to death in the 500 block of E. Davie St. by 23-year-old Willie Wiley. The week prior to that, two men shot each other to death near "Payetteville Crossing" in the southwest section of the city, following a drunken feud.

Miss Satterfield said she received a copy of a resolution passed last weekend by the Carolinas-Virginia section of the National Student Ass'n asking Harding students to invite Miss Counts to return.
Earlier, Dr. Frank P. Graham, former president of the University of North Carolina and now a United Nations mediator, made an address at the school and asked the student body to invite Miss Counts to return.

ASSAULT CASE

The youth was arrested yesterday by Sheriff Willis McCull, the pearl handled pistol-packing officer who gained notoriety in the Groveland rape case and its aftermath eight years ago.
State attorney Gordon Oldham, Jr. identified the suspect as Melvin Hawkins, 18, and said he was the nephew of Virgil Hawkins, Daytona Beach Negro who has been petitioning the U. S. Supreme Court off and on for more than seven years to gain admittance to the University of Florida Law School.
Authorities were mostly tight-lipped about circumstances surrounding the alleged attack.
Oldham said the woman was assaulted while in bed at her home between 12:30 and 1 a.m. Tuesday. He said the attack was by a young man who had gained entrance to the woman's home by slashing a screen and unlatching the front door. The woman was not harmed otherwise.
Sheriffs investigators said footprints found outside the home had been matched with those from shoes owned by young Hawkins. But they said Hawkins denied the crime.
They said he admitted that he was in the neighborhood of the woman's house, in the same general area of his own home.
There had been no signs of racial disturbances in the county as a result of the alleged crime.
That was not the case in 1949. Following the rape of a 17-year-old white housewife at Groveland, armed bands of white men, burning crosses and shooting guns, toured this rural central Florida county. The governor called out the national guard to quell the disturbances.

According to officials of the U. S. District Court here, two terms are already scheduled in January. One begins January 8 and the other starts January 13. It is expected that they will be used to hear one particular case.
Young Holt's suit in Paris, has attacked the constitutionality of the North Carolina "pupil placement laws," a prominent feature of the Pearsall Plan which was enacted by the legislature and voted by the people in a statewide referendum more than a year ago.
Holt's admission to Broughton High School has been denied twice by the Raleigh School board. In filing his suit against the board, Holt contended he met the requirements of the State Pupil Assignment Law.
A motion by the board to dismiss the suit was denied by Federal Judge Gilliam.

Why not organize a Newsboys' Club in your church for the purpose of selling the Carolinian? The more papers the club sells, the more votes can be cast for your pastor. For further information, write the Carolinian.

walked out of the interracial Central High classes following a disturbance in which a fight took place between a white girl and a Negro girl over a sweater found in a locker room.
Jeering students gathered outside of the school building and tried to persuade other white pupils to join in the strike by walking out. The strikers ignored a plea by the principal that they return to classes.
It required police two hours to bring the protest walkout under control. Police said there was no fighting or rioting.
Because they resisted police attempts to break up the crowd, three white girl strikers were removed bodily from the school grounds and carried to headquarters. However, they were later released.
It was learned that the protest was staged because the Negro girl involved in the quarrel was permitted to return to school, while the white girl remained at home at the request of A. B. Jordan, principal. The principal said he asked the white girl's mother to keep her away from school until the matter could be settled.
The Negro girl was asked to bring her father to school with her that morning, but she reported alone bringing a note from her father saying he could not be there.
School officials said the white girl found a sweater in the locker room and the Negro girl claimed it was hers. Then the girls began to fight.
Six squad cars had to be sent to the scene to break up the milling crowd of students out Central High School.

Mrs. De Porter said the attack occurred Dec. 13, while her husband, a native of Patterson, N. C., was with the Wake Forest basketball team for a game with Maryland at College Park, Md.
She told police Moore attacked her as she was returning him to the service station where he worked. She said he had brought the family car to the De Porter home from the station.
Mrs. De Porter said Moore threatened her with a knife, then assaulted her. Police said he returned later to the service station, and telephoned authorities to admit the attack "in a boasting manner."

The awards to churches are as follows: $50, first; $25, second; $15, third; and $10, fourth place.
Instead of giving money bonuses to individual families as was practiced in earlier months, awards will be made directly to a person or committee appointed by the participating churches in Raleigh and Wake County whose purchase slips warrant these awards.
Church members in the Raleigh and Wake County area are urged to turn in purchase slips or receipts to a committee or individual in the church. The slips could be turned in every Sunday morning.

CHAPLE HILL

— To rectify a great evil, students at Charlotte's Harding High School received a letter urging that they invite Dorothy Counts to return to school there.
The letter was written by the Carolinas-Virginia region of National Student's Association, and it was authorized by the passage of a resolution by the NSA two weeks ago.
Dorothy Counts, 17, voluntarily withdrew from Harding High School after she had been humiliated by students and adults following admission to the formerly all-white school.
SHOPLIFTING EASY, EH?
ELKIN—A Negro woman, charged with helping a shoplifting gang steal $307 worth of merchandise in less than an hour, told police, "It was easy."
Hundreds of shoplifters are operating in the two Carolinas, said Thelma Smith of Charlotte to Patrolman Dallas Coe.
"Simply take an article, slip it inside the coat under the arm, walk out of the store, leave the item in a parked car and go back for another load," was the formula that the woman gave.
Thelma Smith's arrest led to the discovery of two other shoplifters. The arrest of these three women may lead to a cleanup of what police called one of North Carolina's largest shoplifting rings.

ODDS & ENDS

fice ad love, Divine sacrifice and Divine Love. Those of us who bury our heads in the sands of selfishness, self esteem and vain egotism, seeking one good regardless of the suffering we cause others, can never know and will never be able to express the true spirit of Christmas. We symbolize the spirit of Christmas when we lift our thoughts above materiality and self seeking and let our good deeds "tell" on the mountains that Jesus Christ is born."
This "telling" is not achieved by word of mouth. We will never be able to convince anyone that the Christ has appeared to us, that this new birth of righteousness has actually taken place in our own experience until it has been experienced in deeds and actions. Telling it on the mountain means elevating our thoughts to the point that we no longer hate our brother, we are no longer indifferent to the needs, worthy aspirations and the rightful aspirations of our fellowman.
When the real significance of Christmas has dawned in consciousness, nothing can prevent us from "telling it on the mountain" that the birth of Christ signifies a new birth for us, the birth of joy, peace, low patience, consideration and kindly patience and brotherly understanding. This birth means that we can never again be satisfied with that which is low and common and, seeking to develop and express the lofty Christlike ideals in all that we do and say, we will meanwhile work and pray for the coming of this spirit to our fellowman. Christmas does signify giving for Christmas will do, the giving of gifts at Christmas time is significant and meaningful. In trying to tell the story of Christmas on the mountain top, however, we should strive to do our best to give gifts that are truly beneficial and lasting.
Giving hope, comfort, sympathetic understanding, inspiring and teaching others how to rise from the depths of despair, degradation and shame are types of gifts that will do more for the recipients than all the material baubles and worldly trinkets our money will buy. When we make such gifts we truly express the Christ or Christmas spirit. We are telling it on the mountain that Jesus Christ is born.
Peter and John typified this spirit when the lame man at the temple gates implored them for a gift of money. Peter's reply to that request could well be the motto of our own lives. Said Peter "Silver and gold have I none, but such as I have, give I thee, in the name of Jesus Christ of Nazareth, rise up and walk." We do not always have silver and
