Virginia's Anti-NAACP Laws "Unconstitutional"

RICHMOND — (AP) — Virginia's three so-called "NAACP laws" were ruled unconstitutional on a 3-1 decision handed down here last week by a special three-judge federal court panel.

Voting against the laws were Circuit Judge Morris Soper, of Baltimore, and district Judge Walter E. Hoffman, Norfolk. The dissenting voice was district Judge Sterling Hutcheson.

The decisions were against laws requiring such organizations as the NAACP to register with the state and disclose their membership lists and source of monies collected, in addition, the decision struck at a law which related to an organization or party filing litigation in which it has no direct interest.

The statutes were passed by a special session of the general assembly in September of 1956.

Seven High School Papers Enter North State 1957 Press Project

By Staff Writer
Seven Negro high school newspapers have entered the North State 1957 School Press Project which ends January 29.

Nineteen high schools entered the contest which was sponsored by the North Carolina Tuberculosis Association, an affiliate of the National Tuberculosis Association. Two schools were disqualified, one white and one colored.

Entries for the 1957 School Press Project included school newspaper articles on either of the following subjects: "Can We Wipe Out TB in Our Town?" and "Your Future in a Health Career." However, the exact words of these topics were not required, but the theme had to be developed on one of them.

Each newspaper was judged as a single entry even though it contained a series of articles on one or both of the subjects. In the event a newspaper presented a series of articles in a number of issues, they were judged as a single entry.

IN EVALUATING THE ARTICLES in the newspaper, the judges considered:

1. Factual accuracy
2. Evidence of intelligent understanding of the subject
3. Clearness of presentation
4. Evidence of active research
5. If art work is used, does it have impact and originality?

Evidence of effect to stimulate journalistic style.

Judges for the contest were: Dr. Ira Grant, Wake County Health Department Raleigh; Nelson W. Stephenson, N. C. Department Public Welfare Raleigh; and Dr. Marcus H. Bulworne, professor of English and speech, St. Augustine's College, Raleigh.

Negro schools participating were: Monroe Avenue High School, Hazlet; Second Ward High School (dormant), Charlotte; Beulah-Camp Colored High School, Rockingham; Mineral Springs High School, Ellerbe; Torrance-Lytle High School, Huntersville; Northwest Junior High School, Charlotte; West Charlotte Senior High School, Charlotte.

Mrs. J. W. Joyner, Mrs. East Martin Street, is a member of the contest committee.

These and other National Negro Model Award winners will add entertainment between style changes in the fashion festival 13 city tour.
