"Not Easy To Receive Justice,"
Dr. Brown Tells Smith Audience

CHARLOTTE — In delivering the Founders' Day address at Johnson C. Smith University, Dr. Kenneth I. Brown, Executive Director of The Danforth Foundation, told the overflow crowd recently that it may be easier to seek justice than to receive it.

The Danforth executive delivered his address in recognition of the ninety-first anniversary of the founding of the Charlotte college. His address preceded the inaugural ceremonies of Dr. Rufus Patterson Perry.

"There are certain universal truths written in the very stars," said Dr. Brown, "and one such truth is the specific truth that here in the United States we love, the day has a head—pray God not too far ahead—when justice shall be given to all Americans by all Americans."

"It is not always easy to give justice, when the giving means a change of thinking and a change of patterned living. But remember it is not always easy to receive justice—and good will and love—when they have been denied you. For the resentment of years makes the act of receiving difficult. And there may be bitterness in one's heart against the one who comes bringing the offering of Justice and Good Will and Love."

"It is easier to ask for forgiveness than to accept it genuinely, graciously, and in love."

"President Perry, we hear much about educating our young people for today. And there is truth in the idea. But President Perry, I urge that you and your faculty give thought to educating your young people for tomorrow, for the brighter tomorrow. So that on that day which the stars above and the God we serve have declared, when justice shall be offered you and your people by those who are now withholding justice, that your students will be prepared to receive it, genuinely, graciously, and in love."

Aubrey Williams Speaks:

Proposal To Close Public Schools
Is Called An Invitation To Chaos

NEW ORLEANS — Legislation to close the public schools, as a measure toward meeting the problem of integration, has been subjected to critical analysis by a Southern educational agency.

"Such drastic action," said the statement, "can amount to abandonment of the basic foundation of our democratic institutions which are grounded on our having a literate, educated and informed population."

"Close the schools legislation" has been proposed for next month's meeting of the Louisiana legislature by the joint legislative committee on segregation, Senator William M. Rainach, Chairman. Such legislation has been approved by other Southern states.

"Destruction of the public schools is an invitation to chaos," wrote Aubrey W. Williams, President of the Southern Conference Educational Fund, Inc., in an open letter to state officials and to all members of the Louisiana legislature.

"Evidence of this," Williams stated, "lies next door in Mississippi where much less sweeping legislation, the repeal of the compulsory school attendance law, resulted in a 44 per cent increase in juvenile delinquency in 1956, the year after the law was repealed."
