

VISITS STATE TRAINING SCHOOL FOR GIRLS — Approximately 35 principals and teachers currently enrolled for the summer session at North Carolina College at Durham were recent guests at State Training School for Girls, Kinston. Upon arrival the group was greeted and welcomed by Mae D. Holmes, Superintendent of the Training School. Miss Holmes discussed the philosophy and objectives of the Training School and the curriculum and other offerings of the school. Throughout her discussion she emphasized preparation for full citizenship and the return of the girls to society. After a question and answer period, the group toured the buildings and grounds. The tour terminated at the Dining Hall, where the group was served refreshments and entertained with musical selections by the Girls Choral Club. The visiting group commended Miss Holmes and her staff for the excellent job they are doing.

NAACP Can't Prove Two Were Shot In Ga.; Says Negroes Are "Afraid"

WASHINGTON — (AP) — The NAACP told the Justice department last week that it cannot substantiate its claim that Negroes have been mistreated in Dawson, Ga. Roy Wilkins blamed the failure to confirm the report on "fear and conflicting rumors" in the south-west Georgia area.

Wilkins wired the Justice department July 4, that on June 28 police shot two Negroes just outside Dawson, Ga., and asked for an investigation. He said he acted on the basis of a telephone call received in New York from Georgia. Officials in the Dawson area promptly denied any such incident had occurred.

A person who has aptitude for details will do well as a copyreader, and if he is good, he will have a chance to move up to the position of chief copyreader.

To be a copyreader chief is to be king. Only the managing editor on the large papers exercise more power over copy or written material than the copyreader chief.

All newspaper copy must come by him. It is he who decides whether it should be used, how much space to give it, and the treatment in display (size of headline and columnar width).

Then, in accordance with the type of story the load being carried by each copyreader, and other considerations, he hands the copy over to one of his assistants with the necessary instructions.

After the copy is read, it is returned to him for a final appraisal. From his desk, copy proceeds to the composing room to be set
