Medics Declare Many People Use Heart Disease As Anxiety Defense

CHICAGO (ANP) — For some persons to face life, they may need to believe they have heart disease even when it has been proved they do not, three eastern physicians said this week.

Their conviction may represent a necessary defense against "potentially overwhelming anxiety," the doctors said in the current Journal of the American Medical Association.

They made a six-year study of 52 persons with chest pain. Of these 27 were classified as having a "cardiac neurosis" in which they showed no evidence of heart disease but were convinced of its presence.

Twenty-five had angina pectoris, a disease marked by paroxysmal chest pain with a feeling of suffocation and impending death. Caused by an oxygen shortage in the heart, angina pectoris is usually precipitated by effort or excitement.

The 27 patients who believed they had heart disease were "all intensely anxious people whose neurotic behavior was readily apparent," the doctors said. They tended to dramatize their symptoms and often referred to their "heart pain." Some of them were totally incapacitated, while others were able to lead an active and constructive life in spite of their symptoms.

They showed "a high degree of secondary gain" from their ailment, the doctors said. In some, the pain represented a means for getting limits to their activities and freed them temporarily from intense pressures or responsibilities. It seemed to act as a means of getting attention and of controlling family members. In others, the pain represented an acceptable "excuse" for failing to attain certain objectives. For some, there was a definite monetary compensation from their pain.

If their compensation or need for "involvement" was mentioned, they became angry and defensive, the doctors noted.

"Once an individual has allowed himself to regress to this state of dependency," the doctors continued, "it is difficult or impossible for him to relinquish this way of life."

New Trend Puts Publicist In The Top Spot
HOLLYWOOD, Calif. (ANP) — A new trend in movie previewing appears to be developing in Hollywood. Now its publicists for whom special screenings of pictures are being arranged.

Going on the theory that publicists rank high among Hollywood's opinion makers because of their important contacts in both journalistic and film circles, Universal-International last week set up a special screening of its new Tony Curtis-Jane Fonda-Linda Cristal-Kennan Wynn comedy, "The Perfect Furlough" for the entire membership of the Publicists Association, L.A.T.S.E. Local 818, at the Academy Award Theater.

It is the third studio to seek the reaction of publicists via special screenings. That's

New Careers Offer Growing Opportunities, But Young Folk Don't Know It: Survey

NEW YORK CITY — (ANP) — High school and college students are greatly underestimating the career opportunities which exist on the reporting and editing staffs of the nation's newspapers.

This is a major conclusion of a report by Alvin E. Austin, who took a year's leave from his post as head of North Dakota University's journalism department to investigate news staff recruitment problems — and solutions — across the nation. His study was sponsored by Dow Jones & Co., publisher of The Wall Street Journal, and by the Dow Jones Foundation.

One of his surveys, of 135 large and small daily papers, disclosed that over 47 per cent consider "shortage of manpower" to be one of their leading problems. Pay for beginning reporters just out of college is rising rather rapidly; it now averages around $73 weekly and ranges above $100. Slightly more than half the newspapers surveyed are paying some top experienced news men more than $10,000 annually.

Should the young person aiming at a news career go to a college journalism school? The report notes that debate on this point still rages among newspaper executives. Of 123 managing editors questioned, 91 would definitely hire journalism school graduates

In addition to the publicists, U-I also is inviting members of the Los Angeles Press Photographers Association, another opinion-making group, to see "The Perfect Furlough."

Start New Year On Right Foot

Are you on a good footing with your feet? Most people aren't, but New Year's is a good time to start building friendly foot relations. Considering the severe foot wear and the amount of abuse they take, it's important to give your feet a better deal in 1959.

Some easy-to-follow resolutions will help get you off on the right foot. They are wise counsels drawn up by a leading foot doctor.

(1) Get shoes that fit and get rid of any that don't. Good fit means your toes are comfortable, not cramped, so that tender nerves and muscles aren't squeezed and blood circulates properly. They must fit snugly around the heels, otherwise the shoes will slide up and down and raise blisters in no time.

(2) Make sure the shoes you buy are leather, top and bottom. Leather uppers provide the support your foot needs, and are supple enough to "give" with the foot. Resilient leather soles are shock absorbers that not only cushion the soles of your feet, but reduce leg and body fatigue, too. Leather linings stay smooth and won't wrinkle and cause blisters.

(3) Another day, another shoe. Positively resolve not to wear the same pair of shoes every day. Give the shoes a rest and your feet a
