Durham Hospital Gets 10Gs In Duke Grant

A $10,000 grant from the Mary Endowment have been received by Duke Biddle Foundation and an at Lincoln Hospital to develop a award of $15,000 from The Duke program of medical education

Frank W. Scott, director, announced today. Earlier the Biddle Foundation awarded $1,000 to Lincoln's program of Nursing Education.

"These grants," Scott said, "were the result of a conference held earlier with local, state, and national medical and hospital authorities headed by Dr. W. C. Davidson, retired dean of the Duke University Medical Center, and now consultant in Medical Education for the Duke Endowment, who is keenly interested in medical education programs for community hospitals."

The need for a program in medical education for the community hospitals grew out of the fact that small hospitals have found it difficult to compete with medical centers and governmental hospitals in recruiting and training interns and residents by offering higher salaries but this has not been sufficient.

When the program starts operating, it is expected to have the cooperation of Howard University's School of Medicine in Washington, D. C., and the Duke University Medical Center here. Both medical schools contribute to the training of residents who will receive their clinical experience primarily at Lincoln.

One of the first steps in implementing the program will be the employment of a director of medical education, who will have the responsibility of organizing and administering the hospital's program in medical education.

Scott said the director will also coordinate the medical staff's teaching activities and assess the quality of work done by the resident staff.

The program is expected to improve the hospital's medical service and the overall quality of patient care.

After a nation-wide search of several months, hospital officials expect an early announcement about the selection of the director of medical education.

With the inauguration of this program in medical education, Lincoln will become the first Negro community hospital in this area to develop a program of this type in medical education with an appointment of a full time director of medical education. Cone Memorial Hospital in Greensboro has a part time medical director, but there are no other community hospitals in North Carolina which have a full time director of medical education.

Speaking of the funds contributed to the new program, Scott said, Lincoln Hospital has long enjoyed the active support of the members of the Duke Family, and in particular, Mrs. Mary Duke Biddle. These recent contributions, which are due in a large measure to the interest of Dr. and Mrs. James H. Semans of Durham, will greatly improve the quality of service to our patients and thus advance the overall health program in our community."

Candidate Fails To Vote, Loses By 1 Ballot In City Race

SUMMERTON (ANP) — When H. B. Davis Jr., recently ended his hard-fought campaign for a seat in City Council, local political observers said the race would be close and they were "so right" in their prediction.

At the election last week, Davis and his wife went to the polls to cast their ballots, but being unable to find their voting certificates — were not allowed to vote. When the final tabulations were in that night—Davis had lost by one vote!

Heard At Vesper "International Living Key To World Conditions" Says George

GREENSBORO — "You and I become, essentially like the things we love," the Rev. Howard L. Cornish of Baltimore, Md., declared in his vesper address at Bennett College Sunday.

The minister who is director of the Christian Center at Morgan State College suggested a parallel between a definition of a scientist and that of a Christian.

"The first characteristic which distinguished both the scientist and the Christian," the Rev. Mr. Cornish said, "is the simplicity to wonder, and the second is the capacity to question. If one is to live significantly he should have the capacity to ask questions at the proper time."

"We need never worry about the future of the student who asks questions. It is the indifferent one, the one who doesn't have enough concern to ask a question, about whom we should be concerned," he added.

GREENSBORO — A warning that nations of the world can no longer live in isolation was made by a University of North Carolina graduate student from India on the opening program of the 38th annual Homemaking Institute at Bennett College Monday.

P. M. George, a candidate for the Ph.D. in sociology at Chapel Hill, spoke on "The Challenges of International Living."

"This is an age of internationalism," he said. "There was a time when we felt that we were not affected by incidents in far-off places, but a troubled Congo today means a troubled world."

Mr. George pointed out that while there is a great diversity of culture, there is a deep-seated unity around the world and that "we can find something divine in every human being if we just search hard enough."

At 8 p.m., in the Little Theatre Babatunde Olatunji, noted Nigerian drummer, and associates, played to a jam-packed house. Accompanying the artist were Stanley Edwards, Hosea Taylor, Robert Crowder and George Edwards. Taylor performed on the flute, saxophone and English horn and the others on a variety of percussion instruments.

This program was sponsored by the Kent Hall residents and non-resident students. On Tuesday night, the Mermer Hall residents presented "An Evening in Germany."

Other activities of the week included a Wednesday morning lecture by Dr. Kenneth I. Brown, of St. Louis, Mo., and a Friday morning lecture by Dr. John W. Halderman, a member of the World Rule of Law Center at Duke University.

On Wednesday night, the Cone Hall residents presented a program "China and the World," on Thursday night the Barge Hall residents gave a skit, "A Look at Life in the USSR," in the Little Theatre and on Friday night, the Reynolds Hall residents presented a program of Indian music, art, and dance.

Domestic consumption and exports of cotton are expected to be about 14.3 million bales this year and 14.5 million bales next year.
