LOVER HAS POOR AIM

RAGUSA, Sicily — Nunzia Ventura, 18, fired eight shots at her fiance, Emanuele Starquedaine, 19, and hit him only once. But she "got her man" three months later. They were married recently in the Ragusa prison where Nunzia is serving a sentence for attempted homicide.

The bride's father, Gaetano Ventura, was present to give her away. He is serving a sentence in the same jail for encouraging his daughter to take vengeance where her fiance kept putting off the wedding.

MAKES APPEAL FOR PARDON
CLEVELAND, Ohio — Lancaster Williams, a Cleveland Sunday School superintendent, apparently had little confidence in the Municipal court here. He asked to make a statement before being tried for assault and battery.

Williams knelt and prayed: "I call on God to see that the truth is found and justice is done."

Judge Joseph Stearns found him guilty and fined him $25.

WIFE WANTS MATE JAILED

FOR KISSING HER

SAN ANTONIO — Can a woman who answers a husband's kiss with a smacking blow over the head file charges against her mate for his display of affection?

A San Antonio woman called police to complain that her husband had come home drunk, and had kissed her.

She promptly broke a vase over his head. He departed.

The wife told police she wanted to file charges against him. The investigating officer advised her that, under the circumstances, she had no grounds for filing charges, so far as he could determine.

POLICE CHIEF WANTS TAX-FREE ALCOHOL FOR DRUNKS

WINSTON SALEM — Police Chief James I. Waller has asked Winston-Salem aldermen for permission to buy tax-free alcohol.

His request isn't really like it sounds — it isn't the drinking kind the chief wants.

The alcohol Waller is trying to get is used in the "breathalyzer" machine the police department uses to administer tests to drunken drivers, and the U. S. Treasury Department at Atlanta, Ga., won't let him have it without authorization from the Board of Aldermen.

lided with another. A police jeep picked up Hernandez and the other motorists, and collided with a taxi. The ambulance driver finally made it to the station, but upon his arrival he got his finger smashed in a door.
