"I Didn't Do It," Says Dad Of Seven

"I didn't do it," moaned Bruce Douglas, 27-year-old father of seven children when a CAROLINIAN reporter confronted him with charges made by his 12-year-old step-daughter, accusing Douglas of rape.
 The alleged incident took place in the early morning hours of Sunday, July 21.
 The girl, whose name is being withheld by this newspaper, attends school at Holly Springs.
 Douglas was brought to Raleigh after his wife had talked to the alleged victim, and had the child examined by a nearby physician who corroborated the fact that the child had been sexually abused. He was lodged in the Wake County Jail on a charge of rape.
 On Wednesday, July 24, Douglas was taken to Fuquay Springs, Recorier's Court where he was bound over to the Wake Superior Court to await trial during the September term of court.
 The maximum penalty for rape in North Carolina is death in the State's gas chamber.
 The wife of Bruce Douglas is contacted in a tobacco field near home Monday afternoon. She said that on the morning of the reported assault, she left the house about 7:00 a.m. to visit her mother who lives nearby.
 "When I returned home," Mrs. Douglas stated, "I found my 12-year-old daughter very upset and nervous. I asked her what the Jack Greenberg, director-counsel of the Legal Defense Fund, said that the U. S. Federal District Court ruling "denies the right of Holiday Inns of America to
