THE CAROLINIAN RALEIGH, N. C., SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 14, 1964

DEAR SALLY: "I'm filled up to much. MUCH better than DEAR SALLY: "I'm filled up to here with all the talk by certain ignortant people about how ter-rible it is for a mother to work and leave her young children at home, and my husband is one of the biggest talkers about this. The fact is, though, that I like my work in the office where I am em-still 1 think I'm way ahead in happiness and contentment. Are you with me? M.T. DEAR M.T.: Sorry, out I'm not! You may think you're way ahead" in happiness and contentment, but believe me, you're "way behind" in your perspective and sense of val-ues Unless a mother of pre-school children simply must work for financial reasons, her place is definitely at home. A mother's tender loving care and presence is the most im-portant thing in the world in the minds and lives of small children, and I can't even be-gine be every coscientious mother's greatest joy and hap-pines.

DEAR SALLY: I met our family doctor at a social function re-cently and since I had been intending for some time to visit his office for a diagnosis of some phy-sical aliment that has been bothering me, I acized this opporuni-ty at the party to explain my trouble and ask his advice. I was shocked by his reaction. He practically snubbed me, gave me no answer at all, and walked away leaving me standing there open-mouthed. What was so horr about what I did? MRS. B.C. DEAR MRS. B.C.: What you did is probably one of the most common breaches of most common breaches of manners regarding profession-al men who give advice of any kind. Just because you met him at a nightclub, cocktall party, or church social, this doem't give you the right to seek free advice from him—the same kind of advice that his training warrants his charging a fee for in his office or on a professional visit in your home. Your doctor's reaction to you was probably the culmination of many, many pre-vious such requests for "free advice."

DEAR SALLY: I'm a broken-hearted guy of 22. I've been in love with a certain beautiful girl for three years, but she doesn't love me. I did at one time succeed in getting her to date me for four consecutive watch de me for four consecutive weekends, but now I'm lucky if I can squeeze in a little movie date on some odd night in the middle of the week. Last Saturday night I went to a community dance, and she was there dancing every dance with dozens of other fellows, but I couldn't set one single dance with her. Is there any advice at all that you can give me on how to get her in-terested in me? JOE. DEAR JOE: I advice you to

DEAR JOE: I advice you to wake up and face the facts. The girl never really has been interested in you, and that's just the way it works some-times. Why don't you bow gracefully out of the picture? There ARE other girls in the world, you know . . . and some very sweet ones, too.

NOTE TO G.E.M .: When you're on the receiving end of such per-sonal questions, your best answer is a tactful one whereby you re-ply in such an indefinite manner that if your friend has any brains orribl at all he will understand that you don't want to discuss the matter. If, however, he persists in his in-terrogation, then you surely have every right to be blunt with a reply something like, "That's just a bit too personal, and I don't care to discuss it." At this point, you shouldn't be worrying about offending or insulting him . . . he deserves it.

MONEY may not bring happiness but it brings such a good imitation that it is often hard to tell it from to you was probably the culthe real thing.

(News items this week from Forsyth, Nash and Recking-ham Counties.) Low Cost Nutritional Meals "Homemakers want to serve their families nutritional meals but think they cannot afford "t." reports Mrs. Lottie Hairston, home economics agent in Forsyth Coun-ty. "So club members have been studying low cost meals with spe-cial emphasis on economical cuts of meat. John Christian, food science specialist at N. C. State, con-ducted a special interest meet-ing in the country emphasiz-ing the economy of buying meat in bulk. He demonstrated methods of earving the meat into family size servings. Education Project Planned A recent survey in Nach Country

Education Project Planned A recent survey in Nash County revealed that local citizens are interested in upgrading their ed-ucation through adult classes. Mrs. Margaret Wade, home economics agent, says plans are being made to have class-es taught logally to meet the needs of the people. Mrs. Wade says the Home Demon-stration Club members are backing the proposed program. Foods and Nutrition Classes

Special classes in foods and au-trition were held in Rockingham County. As a result, Mr. and Mra. James. Broadnax, Leaksville, Rt.

James Broadnax, Learsville, It. 1, are now doing a good job of stretching their food dollars nu-tritionally for their family of 8. Mrs. Zadie Jackson, home economics agent, says Mrs. Broadnax and her family get inget in a set to plan Broadnax and her family get together once a week to plan the meals and shopping list. "By using the daily newspaper to guide us, we plan for 'specials' offered in meat, seasonal and plentiful foods, in the menus," adds Mrs. Broadnax.

NEW MURDER EVIDENCE NEW YORK (NPI)-Edward M. Keating, publisher of Ram-paris magazine, disclosed here last Sunday that he has receiv-ed some new information in nection with the murder last com summer of three civil rights workers near Phiadelphia, Miss. Though he declined to comment on the type of infor-mation he has, he did say he was willing to turn the infor-mation over to the Justice Depariment, provided his "wit-ness" would be protected.
