OBITUARY.

DIED.—At LaGrange, N. C., Sept. 9, 1873, Henry, infant son of H. E. and C. N. Dillon, aged fourteen months. Lonely seems the fireside Around which he played, And sad are the hearts Which loved him so well. Yet with the tears of grief, comes the comforting thought that he is free from pain and with the dear Savior, who has said, "Suffer little children to come unto me, and forbid them not, for such is the kingdom of heaven." Too pure and gentle for the chilling blasts of this life, the Angels beckoned Henry away to that shining shore, where his voice now blends with the heavenly choir, chanting praises unto his God. His noble form yielded to the grim monster, and the Angel of Death calmly closed his eyes in the "sleep that knows no waking," and gently moved his spirit from the scrolls and sufferings of its earthly abode to the glorious immortality that awaits the fight of the infant's soul. And now, dear friends, let us remember that when the night of death falls darkly upon our souls, if we have rightly lived, the shadows will quietly flee before the light of eternal day. The heavenly light shall break in upon the soul winging its flight to peaceful realms, no more to bend beneath cares, for there is no darkness of sorrow and affliction there, and you shall meet your little darling sparkling among the glories of heaven. So grieve no more fond parents, Your child is an Angel now; A radiant crown inscribes His fair and youthful brow.
