

LEGISLATURE'S THOUGHT BEING DIVERGED THROUGH 'DEFICIENCY' SMOKE SCREEN

Progressive Spirit Inspired by Present State Administration's Program is Being Assailed With "Alarming Viciousness and Persistency, the Motive being to "Kill Morrison."

North Carolina may be facing the most serious crisis in its history. The new and progressive spirit that was aroused through the bold program of Morrison administration in the 1921 general assembly is being assailed with a viciousness and persistency that is alarming.

Through the smoke screen of a treasury deficit has created, the attention of the legislature is being diverted from opportunities for carrying the state forward and placing it on a par with the greatest among the progressive states of the union.

It is of the emergency existed when the program of the state should speak that emergency. During the past few years, the new program of Morrison administration has been a constant reminder to the people of the state that the program of Morrison administration is not a passing fancy, but a permanent program of progress.

"Kill Morrison" is Motive. Back of the smoke screen, the motive is the destruction of Morrison administration. He is being assailed with a viciousness and persistency that is alarming.

On the hill overlooking the home, under the low spreading branches of the oak and chestnut, marks the last resting place of Dr. J. B. Phillips. For more than four years went in and out among the people to whom he gave the best service of his life, which always seemed a pleasure and joy.

He was born May 18th 1841, died January 27th, 1923, aged 81 years, 8 months, and 9 days, and was buried by the members of his Lodge, No. 285. His faithful companion, who for 37 years shared his every joy and sorrow, died January 20th 1923, and was laid to rest beside him.

As a physician, he was so kind, sympathetic and fatherly that he endeared himself with all with whom he came in contact. Such are the beautiful deeds that awaken sorrow and leave a lasting impression on our memories, and we are proud of him.

He was afflicted for more than twenty years with a patient and submissive. A good man is gone. What more can we say? Therefore, be it resolved: 1st. That we humbly bow to the decree of the almighty and Merciful Ruler.

2nd. That the immediate family and friends be offered our deepest sympathy in the loss of father and mother. 3rd. That the Lodge has lost a worthy brother, and in honor of his memory, the members will wear the usual badge of mourning for thirty days.

PHARAOH'S COUCH TAKEN FROM TOMB

Only one object was removed on January 24 from the tomb of Tutankhamen. It was a large hatched wooden couch thickly overlaid with strips of gold. Each side of the couch was shaped to represent a sacred cow, or Anubis. The horns stood up straight for more than a foot and the tail was the cow's back.

Those who had seen the other contents of the tomb unanimously agreed that this couch—and it might be added the other two couches with lion heads and typhon heads still in the tomb—does not compare in an artistic sense with many of the other objects in the tomb. But when it is remembered that this couch had a religious significance it is easy to comprehend that the designers put religion above art.

This fact is in itself an illuminating sidelight on the spirit animating these ancient artists. Where there was no religious significance involved the artists allowed their artistic conservatism full play, but once they had to confine themselves to the conventional or traditional form of gods or goddesses—forms described in earlier periods of Egypt when there was no such freedom of one or delicate grace as characterized—they subordinated their sense of beauty. The result was seen in this couch. It was most impressive, but largely because it was grotesque.

Mr. Carter first removed one side. He had to exercise the greatest care, as the height of the cow from the hoofs to the tip of the horns was almost as high as the doorway and passage. Again in the decorations on the cow's attenuated body there was evidence that the artist's cling to tradition.

There was a dramatic interruption in the work by the United States Department of Agriculture. Mr. Carter had to leave the tomb to attend to a matter that newspaper men were always ready to take up. Mr. Carter was compelled to go to the United States, leaving to meet the Earl of Carnarvon.

STATE FINANCIAL INVESTIGATION ORDERED. (Continued from page one) member of the corporation commission. Asserting that he was a messenger bringing tidings that were not cheerful, the corporation commissioner said he was presenting the "bare bones" of the state's condition. His article was a protest against increased expenditures by the general assembly, and making the point that appropriations and finances had nothing to do with the state road building program, which was being carried by special taxes.

That part of his statement which the governor assailed is as follows: "Maxwell's Conclusions. The recently issued report of the state treasurer ending attention to a deficit of $1,853,895.48 was discussing the deficit for the one full fiscal year only, in that fiscal year there was included in revenue receipts a return for a full year of income tax under the new law. For the preceding seven months period, in which part of this income revenue was collected, the figures in the treasurer's report show another deficit in revenue receipts against operating expenses of $1,982,519.83. No report has been issued for the last five months period, but a statement has been made by the treasury department, July 1st 1922, to December 31 1922, which shows a deficit of $1,508,229.64. Taking the three periods separately, each of them shows a heavy deficit, and taking them collectively, the treasurer's figures are as follows:

NORTH CAROLINA TO HAVE

More of spindles installed during 1922 was smaller than for any year during the past 12 years. The number in sight for this year, however, shows that the business depression is over in this section and that the textile industry is preparing to forge ahead at a rapid rate.

Economic authority in North Carolina and those from other states who have investigated the industrial situation in North Carolina, have been one in their opinion that the remarkable development in the textile and other industries in North Carolina has been the result of several notable factors, among them being the attitude of business and freemasonry about the part of the people of the state as a whole and the legislative bodies, the availability of cheap, constant electric power in large quantities, the type and character of the men who run the industries of the state, the intelligence, the spirit of independence, the industry, the ambition, and the thorough-going Americanism of the North Carolina working man.

A DEAR ONE IS GONE. The subject of this sketch was born December 31, 1912. Age 10 years, 11 months and 29 days. Departed this life December 29, 1922. She was the oldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Clyde Hanner, Verlee was loved by all who knew her. She always was her playmate with a smile. We loved Verlee but God loved her more and called her from us. She was a kind and obedient child at home and at school. She loved to go to Sunday School and never failed to have a good lesson. We all will miss Verlee to Sunday School, but most of all she will be missed in the home, but God had a work for her to do and he said come. But we will cry to the bereaved family and relation, not to grieve for her for Christ said, "Suffer little children to come unto me for such is the Kingdom of Heaven. And unless we become as little children we cannot inherit eternal life. There is a vacant chair by the fireside that cannot be filled but our loss is her eternal gain. Now let us all be prepared to meet Verlee where there will be no tears or sorrow but all will be praised around the throne of God. She is gone, forever gone; her journey here is done. Years and ages may still roll on but we will hear Verlee's sweet voice no more. E. F. EARP

How To Use Vick's VapoRub For Deep Grippy Colds

First, It Is Very Important That a Thorough Rubefacient Or Counter-Irritant Effect Be Produced On the Surface of the Skin Around the Lungs.

This draws the blood from congested lungs, Lessening the danger of Pneumonia. Then Treat With Vicks

Deep, grippy colds, frequently leading to pneumonia, have been unusually prevalent this winter. In some sections they are called influenza, but are not so virulent as the influenza cases during the first epidemic, tho they are worse than ordinary colds. For these cases the usual light application of Vicks is not sufficient.

The Danger Is From Pneumonia. What is needed therefore is something to decrease the congestion of the lungs. For this purpose there is nothing like a rubefacient or counter-irritant, as witness the use of blisters, poultices and plasters for many generations. This reddening or irritation of the skin causes a rich blood to the surface; the circulation is improved; there is a sensation of warmth and the possibility of pneumonia is greatly lessened.

A "Quick Rubefacient Needed. The value of this counter-irritant effect is greatly increased if it is produced quickly. Nearly every family has its favorite method—onion poultices, turpentine stapes, mustard plasters and poultices of various kinds are all good.

How to Produce This Effect. Our experiments have shown that an ordinary mustard plaster is very effective. Take one part of mustard and two parts of flour or lax seed meal for adults, and one to three parts for children under eight years. An even simpler method, particularly for adults, is to apply towels wrung out in hot water—as hot as the patient can stand. Whatever method is used, the application should be applied over the throat and chest until the skin is thoroughly reddened. In very deep colds, the sides and especially the back from the middle of the shoulder blades to a point just above the waist, should also be treated. For adults, a hot mustard foot-bath—one tablespoon of mustard to a gallon of water—given at this stage of the treatment, will aid in drawing the blood from congested parts.

Then Massage With Vicks. After the skin is thoroughly reddened, it should be dried lightly and immediately the patient should be given a brisk massage with Vicks all over the parts. Continue this for five minutes. This increases the counter-irritant effect. Then apply Vicks thickly over all the parts; that is, spread it on like you would a poultice—about one-sixteenth of an inch thick or more—and cover with two thicknesses of hot flannel cloths.

Vicks Acts Like a Vapor Lamp. The advantage of applying Vicks thickly over the body is this: Vicks is so made that the body heat gradually releases the ingredients in the form of vapors. The more Vicks applied the stronger these vapors will last. The night clothing should always be loose around the neck and the bed clothing arranged in the form of a funnel. These vapors being lighter than air rise up from the chest and, if the bed clothing is properly arranged, pass by the nose and mouth and are thus inhaled with each breath, carrying the medication directly thru the air passages to the lungs.

"Slimy Taste" "When I feel stupid, get constipated, or bilious, I take a good dose or two of Black-Draught and it sets me straight," writes Mr. George B. Haislep, of R. F. D. 2, Columbia, S. C. "It cleanses the liver and I feel all right, and have not used any other medicine as I do not see the need of it. I am a guard at the State Reformatory, and have been for three or more years. When I first heard of BLACK-DRAUGHT Liver Medicine and the good medicine it was, I had been having a tired feeling when I'd get up in the morning. I would be stiff and sore, and had a slimy, bad taste in my mouth, but didn't think so much of it till I began to feel stupid and didn't feel like eating—then I knew I needed medicine. It was then I began Black-Draught, and I felt all made over, ready for any kind of work, ready to eat and sleep. So, for any return of this trouble, I take Black-Draught, and for 25 years it has been my medicine, and I wouldn't be without it at all. My work is constant. I am on my feet a lot. I am out of doors, and fresh air and Black-Draught are all the medicines I need. I recommend it to others for I know it is good." Sold Everywhere.
