said he would go strong to their sections because Democrats believe he is a winner.

The same editor, are divided between Secretary of Commerce Hoover and Vice President Dawes in their predictions of the Republican nominee. Most of them picked Dawes, explaining that Hoover lacks the political backbone necessary to come to the convention with more than a minority following.

They were virtually unanimous in their belief that the fate of the candidates would not be decided at the election.

Governor Smith of New York and Secretary of Commerce Herbert Hoover were named the outstanding candidates for their parties' presidential nominations by William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, speaking at Lima, Ohio, Sunday.

Governor McLean will introduce Senator James A. Reed to the Daughters of the American Revolution at their annual state convention in Raleigh March 27-29. The senator is to speak on the 27th, having a date at the University of North Carolina on the same day. The coming of the Missouri senator has created some fear in Raleigh, according to dispatches, in view of the fact that he is a ferocious opponent of certain measures being agitated in Washington in which the overwhelming majority of organized women have a great deal of interest. But it is noted the senator has not been quite so ferocious in his campaign in the waning days, it having been observed that at times he even speaks lovingly of Woodrow Wilson and in a pinch is able to forget whether or not he is a prohibitionist or an anti.

Prohibition Main Issue, Says Linney

That the main issue in the 1928 election would be the prohibition issue, and such being the case, the greatest independent vote in the history of the country would be cast, and that the country would stand for none but a clean and honest candidate and that Secretary of Commerce Hoover was the man of the hour, were the sentiments expressed by Frank A. Linney of Boone in an address before a gathering of Republicans in Winston-Salem last Friday night.

According to The Journal, it was a typical Linney address, whose first stroke was to deplore the fact that the Democratic party was about to desert and renounce the greatest bit of legislation it had ever accomplished. "The greatest bit of legislation the Democratic party ever passed was the eighteenth amendment. The solid south stood back of that movement and got it through. And now, if they listen to the little song that's being sung up in New York, they'll defeat the greatest achievement they've ever arrived at."

"The issue of prohibition, I am convinced, will be the greatest issue in the coming election," continued Mr. Linney. "And it's the duty of Republicans in North Carolina to secure a mighty support back of Hoover. I can't believe that North Carolina will ever desert prohibition."

Democrats "Setting Pretty"

The Democratic national committee will have $250,000 to start its 1928 campaign, Chairman Clean Shaver announces. This sum will be left over after the 1924 deficit is paid off, he said.

"Some" Platform

Arnor L. Gilliam, attorney general of Indiana, has announced his candidacy for the Republican senatorial nomination on a platform of "prohibition without fanaticism and hypocrisy, and Americanism without Klansm."
