

Appalachian Hi School News

Basketball
The last two games have seen Appalachian's Blue Devils go down fighting before Walkertown's strong quintet and the College "B" team. On Jan. 11 the local five came back strong in the last half but the rally was not quite enough to offset Vaughn's shooting for the visitors. The final score was 40-31 with Vaughn of Walkertown garnering 21 points. High man for Appalachian was Ralph Hodges with 9 points. Following close on Hodges' heels was David Edmisten with 8 points. The next night the same boys took on the College "B" team again and after leading the college squad most of the way dropped the game by the close margin of two points. It was a hard-fought scrap from start to finish, and the high school five exhibited a well-balanced attack that kept the boys rocking up tallies in the pinches. A costly foul in the last minute of play let the college squad tie up the score at 25 all—while a few seconds later they made the winning marker. Starters were Edmisten, Clay, Greene, Aldridge and Hodges, while York, Norris and Calloway saw action later.

National Income Estimate Raised To 140 Billions

Washington, Jan.—Thriving business and many jobs during reconversion have led government economists to hike sharply their estimates of the 1946 national income.

Even in the face of mounting labor difficulties, the consensus among federal agencies now is that the figure will run between $140,000,000,000 and $150,000,000,000.

This would mean a drop from 1945's booming $160,000,000,000 only about half as severe as had been estimated officially after V-J day.

At that time economists felt the first full year of peace would produce only about $130,000,000,000 of national income. They reasoned that civilian demand and private production would be unable at once to take up much of the slack left by the big slash in government war spending.

The new figures mean larger business. President B. B. Dougherty has just returned from a trip to Raleigh where he secured an emergency allotment of money to rehabilitate Justice Annex dormitory. The dormitory will be made into 14 apartments for returning veterans and their wives.

The enrollment of men to date is 125 with many others seeking entrance at the beginning of the spring term on Feb. 18. However, veterans are being enrolled here on any date at which they present themselves.

NEW CAR REGISTRATIONS

Raleigh, Jan. 12—The registration of new automobiles in North Carolina reached a peak for the war period during December, when 252 new certificates were issued, the motor vehicles department announced. The December registration topped that of the previous month by 106.

Work May Be Resumed On Dam at Butler

TVA in Knoxville, Tenn., has expressed its opinion that resumption of construction on Watauga Dam at Butler on July 1 is fairly definite providing congress appropriates the necessary finances. At least that agency has said it is ready to start work again if the money is available.

Work on the Watauga project was ordered abandoned during the war and since that time there have been several efforts made to get it started again.

Sale of public lands in Wyoming has averaged about 10,000 acres annually since it became a state.

New Job for Dairy Farmers in 1946—Help Broaden Markets

The dairy industry has squared away to another big job, not even pausing to pat itself on the back for the record breaking milk production in 1945.

In this brand New Year of 1946, this new job is to reach even higher standards of quality and to get even more milk and more milk products into the daily diet of more people.

In 1941, Americans consumed an average of slightly more than six pounds of cheese each year. During the war, consumption dropped to around four pounds, due to demand by the armed forces and for lend-lease. The job the industry has set for itself is not only to get back to that level but to go beyond it, to eight pounds or more per person.

We need to do this for some very important reasons. First, the consumer needs more cheese and other dairy products to get the great benefits of these best of all foods. Second, we need to build a greater market for milk from American farms . . . from your farm and your neighbor's farm.

Just take a look at what an extra two pounds of cheese would mean. It figures up to a total of about 280,000,000 pounds more cheese per year and that means a market for two and a half billion pounds more milk just to provide that increase in one dairy product.

The way to get it done is to produce high quality products, backed by a nationwide program of selling and promotion. A big help also in making markets for more milk will be new products such as ice cream mixes, powdered whole milk, and new varieties of cheese. Kraft will have these and other items ready for the consumer.

That little word "quality" will be a big factor in getting this job done. The quality program starts on your farm. You can't make a silk purse out of a sow's ear, nor can you make high grade dairy products out of poor milk.

Your part of the program starts in your barn and in your herd. Right here at the beginning of this new year I want to review, in a few words, the things which make up a sanitation program on a dairy farm.

Clean barns, clean cows, clean utensils and clean workers; prompt and proper cooling; correct milking—these are the primary parts of your program to produce the kind of dairy product the consumer is going to demand.

Keeping ceilings, rafters, side-walls, mangers, stanchions and barn floors clean is vital. Brushing cows, clipping flanks and udders, washing udders with warm water are the important steps in animal cleanliness.

I imagine you have on hand some extension bulletins which tell the proper steps in clean milk production. If not see your county agent.

And be sure and study the articles on the proper handling of milk in the November-December issue of the Kraftman. If you do not receive it regularly, write me at 509 Peshtigo, Chicago 90, Ill., and I'll send you a free copy.

These practices are all matters of habit—getting started on a system of work and following through every day at each milking. Once you have set up this program you'll find it easy to follow. And you'll know you've done your part in the nationwide, long range program of building this great industry to new high levels.

All of us learned how working together during a war can bring miracles of production. The dairy industry, from farm to distributor, can show the rest of the business world how working together can accomplish still greater goals in times of peace.

Sands Home Club Holds Monthly Meet

The Sands Home Demonstration Club met Friday, Jan. 11, at the home of Mrs. Joe Norris, with Mrs. Stanford Storie as joint hostess.

In the absence of both the president and vice-president, a very brief business session was held. The members arrived in the forenoon for an all-day meeting, which consisted of an old-fashioned quilting.

At noon the group gathered around the dining table, abundantly laden with old-fashioned foods. Following the dinner, the group again gathered around the quilt, and an informal discussion was held. A number of topics were discussed, but the most important was that concerning the clothing drive. It was decided that each member of the club was to find as many garments as possible, and take to the home of Mrs. Jim Hodges, where it is to be packed and delivered to the proper place. The box must be ready for delivery by the last of the month. Each member was urged to go full length in this drive, as the need is so great. For years the people of the Sands community have been outstanding for their generosity and their willingness to help those in distress, so it is felt that the box will be filled to capacity.

The club was honored to have as its guest during the afternoon, Mrs. J. H. Jones.

In the late afternoon, the quilt, a lovely bow-tie design, was completed and taken from the frame.

The next meeting will be held with Mrs. Glenn Brown at her home on Feb. 8. At this meeting, the members plan to fete Mrs. Ed Clay with a miscellaneous bridal shower.

the whistle blew, Mary Sue Greene made a shot which won the game for Appalachian. Mary Sue was high scorer with 17 points. Helen Hodges scored 7 points and Annie M. Carroll 8, making the total score 29.

Yarber and Benfield made Newland's 28 points, each scoring 14.

Friday night, Jan. 11, Walkertown came to Boone to play the Appalachian girls. The Blue Devils fought a hard game but suffered a defeat by the score of 11 to 36. Annie Mae Carroll was high scorer with 7 points. The guards, Katherine Honeycutt, Lucille Greer and Fairy Hodges fought a good game.
