Information About The Local Cannery

The Boone community cannery will be open Tuesday, December 3. It will be a great favor for those who wish to can to make an appointment at the high school before that date. If there should be a lot of meat to can that date everyone may not be able to get it done that day and some meat may spoil. Again it is difficult to can meat and other products on the same day. You will be taking a chance on getting your canning done if you do not make an appointment. The cannery will be open on Thursday, December 5 also.

Sales Hours, Dates Burley Sales Set By Warehouse Group

Sales of tobacco throughout the burley tobacco belt will open on Dec. 2, warehousemen decided last week at a meeting held in Lexington, Ky.

A sales committee of the recently organized Burley Auction Warehouse Association adopted recommendations for opening the markets then, and for operating three and one-half hours a day and for five days a week.

Also approved was a recommendation that the Christmas sales recess start Friday Dec. 20, and end Monday, Dec. 30, with a suspension of auctions on New Year's Day.

Consideration was given an earlier opening of markets for the 1947-48 sales season, possibly as early as Nov. 17. Purpose of this, it was explained, would be to prevent midseason congestion in redrying plants.

The sales committee was empowered to declare a sales holiday any time a congestion develops.

A resolution to promote fair trade practices in the sale of leaf was adopted as a means of obtaining "the highest market price for each basket of tobacco sold at auction."

State College Hints To Homemakers

As nylon fabrics become more numerous, questions as to proper laundering are also increasing in numbers. Clothing specialists give you these hints to help get your nylons clean safely and with little work.

Use lukewarm water and a mild soap, the same as you use for any washable, fine fabric. Rinse well without wringing or twisting and your fabric will last longer.

Do not force-dry or hang colored fabrics directly on or above a radiator. They may fade if you do. Direct sunlight may also fade such material.

Properly finished nylon fabric is highly resistant to wrinkling and only requires touching up with a warm iron. Do not use a hot iron. Ironing the wrong side when your garment is slightly damp helps to take out wrinkles. You can use most cleaning agents on nylon. Because of the nature of some dyes, it is a good idea to try on an inconspicuous part of the garment first. If there is any doubt, send your garment to a reliable dry cleaner.

The careless use of non-perspiration may do as much or more damage to garments than perspiration, according to textile and clothing specialists of the U. S. Department of Agriculture. When a good dress goes to pieces under the arm or changes color, even skillful patching may not make it wearable again. In using these chemicals women should be careful to follow directions on the label. Any chemical strong enough to stop perspiration may rot fabric or cause the dye to fade or change in color. Cotton and rayon fabrics especially are likely to be rotted by preparations that have an acid reaction. Good grooming is a part of happy and successful living.

Cotton Industry To Meet at Charlotte

"North Carolina and South Carolina cotton ginners are going to attempt to do something about this business of aiding cotton in its fight against synthetic fibers, when they meet in Charlotte on December 9 and then join the National Cotton Council conference, also at Charlotte, on December 10," says Fred P. Johnson, executive secretary of the N. C. Ginners Association.

At the ginners' meeting Director D. W. Watkins of the South Carolina Extension Service will review the extension program on cotton. Irvin Morgan of Farmville will represent the seed crushers, and O. L. Edwards of St. Charles, S. C., the ginners.

Charles A. Bennett, of the U. S. Gin Laboratory at Stoneville, Miss., will outline the limitations of existing cleaning and drying equipment. Another representative from this laboratory, Francis L. Gerdes, will discuss the "Fiber Characteristics of Mechanically Produced Cotton." Ginners will receive the latest information on how to select a gin "outfit" in the address of Harold F. Lummus of the Lummus Gin Company of Columbus, Ga. Seed grading and marketing is the subject of a paper to be delivered by T. H. Gregory, executive secretary of the National Cottonseed Products Association, Memphis, Tenn.
