We truly wish for Mr. and Mrs. Parlier many more years of real happiness.

Mr. and Mrs. Parlier received many nice gifts.

About Your Home By FRANCES DELL

Most lilies found in American gardens are identical to wild lilies. This need not be the case for there are seven new hybrid garden lilies that are exceedingly long-growing. The seven are: Green Mountain, Cascade Madonna, Pink Select, Rainbow, Apireban, Mid-Century and Fiesta.

The Rainbow hybrids are very hardy. However, all seven are so sturdy that they do not need staking or any special pampering.

Do not make the mistake of thinking all hybrids lilies are worth growing. It takes large-scale production and continuous selection to keep strains up to standard or to improve them. For this reason, there is a great temptation to grow a lot of bulbs from seed and sell them as "X" hybrid. In this way you get nothing any better than ordinary lilies.

It is a waste of time and money to buy dried-up, desiccated bulbs like those often seen on counters of small garden stores all over the country. A garden store without cold-storage equipment has no business selling lilies, for lilies must be treated as living plants, not dormant bulbs.

Lily bulbs ship well. The best thing to do is buy by mail from a firm that specializes in lilies. In this way you will be sure your bulbs have been stored correctly.

Lilies grow best in a mildly acid soil well aerated. If your soil is sticky and clayey, mix in peat generously. Lilies need moisture, but the bulbs will not if the soil is at all swampy. They need a little shade in hot climates.

Madonna lilies should be covered with not more than an inch of soil. Other lilies should be planted four to five inches deep.

Unusual Birthday Party Is Held

An unusual birthday celebration was held October 4, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Stanley South honoring their year old son, David, and his great-grandfather, Mr. W. T. Casey, Sr., who was 85. The home was decorated in a color scheme of pink and white with garlands of balloons for the children. The dining table was centered with two cakes—a large one for Mr. Casey holding 85 candles and a small one for David with a single candle. Delicious refreshments were served and favors given to the following guests: Master Stacy Eggers III, Master Guy Casey, Misses Julia and Pamela Storie, Mr. and Mrs. A. E. South, Mr. and Mrs. Morris Casey, Jr. and Mrs. James Storie, Marjorie South and Jeanette Smith.

Later in the evening the group was entertained with a buffet supper at the home of Mr. and Mrs. A. E. South.
