Scouts End Camporee With Many Awards

Twenty-seven Scouts ended Sat-urday what one local Scout offici-al described as "the most success-ful" camporee he remembers in on a point

Three troops from the Watauga District were represented in the outing which began Priday afternoon, and included activities such as a big campfire, cookouts, and hiking. At least eleven full rank advancements were noted, with all the Scouts participating passing

Watauga Participates Troop 15, of Perkinsville Bap- In Forest Fire Meet are than a thousand rural com-mity leaders from 20 mountain unties gather in the City Audiorium for the Western North Carline Forest Fire Prevention Con-Development Council, the Western North Carolina Associated Com-munities, the Appalachian Lumberen's Club, the Furniture. Veneer and Plywood Council of the North Carolina Forestery Association.

The gathering is a part of a concerted blow the South is striking at forest wildfires estimated to be costing the 16 southern states nearly a quarter of a billion of dollars per year. Governor Luther Hodges has said that North Carolina burns up 35 million dollars annually.

Theme of this luncheon meeting, which starts at 10 oclock and runs until midafternoon, will be "Rural ommunity action can stop forest fires." Ten prominent men repre senting industry, education, and government will speak on the forest fire problem from the view point of the lumberman, the pulp and wood industry, the farmer, businessman, banker, lawyer, the schools and the wildlife conser-

As a regional follow-up to the Governor's Conference on Forest Fire Prevention attended by 2,200 leading North Carolinians in Raleigh last autumn, the Western North Carolina meeting will have three principal aims:

(1) To inform the public of mountain counties from forest

(2) To arouse militant public opinion against the serious frequency of forest fires caused by carelessness; and (3) To receive and consider suggestions for solving the forest fire problem by unified community

People attending will study existing education and public opinion tools and how to use them. They will learn how local pro-
