Washington.—A critical rift ap-cars to be haping up in the Dem-cratic Party which, unless it is called, bids fair to nullify the poli-cally brilliant manner in which Majority, Leader Lyndon steered the explosive Civil Rights bill through Congress withwing his party sky high.

The breach between the North nd the South can be laid to a umber of things—the Civil Rights Bill and subsequent unrest in the thern grassroots; the federalstate squabble in Arksnas and its ramifications in the North and South; and, more recently, a running battle between Democratic nal Chairman Paul Butler and Southern political leaders.

The fusa over Butler reached a rescendo when, during a Democratic parley in Raleigh, N. C., the party chairman made statements to newsmen which the South considered violently derogatory, and Informed sources in Washington-contend that Butler's anti-South statements at Raleigh may have been a deliberate effort on his part to stir up sentiment in his favor among Northern liberals because of a current behind-the-scenes battle to dump him as party leader.

These sources indicate that former U. S. Senator Earle Clements of Kentucky, now executive director of the Democratic Senatorial ering influence in Democratic Party Strategy in the Senate, is slated to succeed Butler, whose ouster they consider to be immi-

It is well-known in Washington that Butler had been conferring with Senators here until the close of the session last month, in an attempt to line up assistance in retaining his party leadership, which has been on the decline among local Democratic party leaders not only in the South, but in the West and in some Northern states as Clement's role in effecting Democratic strategy in the recent Proxmire victory in Wisconsin strengthened his hand among Senate Democrats. Sources close to Butler has further damaged his position in the party by his Raleigh statements on the South.

Reports are rampant on Capitol Hill to the effect that Lyndon Johnson is steering the move to place Clements in the Democratic chairmanship. Johnson's influence help-ed the Kentuckian get his position with the Senatorial Campaign Com-

This, of course, would strengthen Johnson's chances of obtaining the Democratic nomination for President in 1960. The Majority Leader has recently said he will not seek the presidency, but observers here are not convinced that the Texan is definitely taking him-self but of the race at this early

Butler caused a serious breach between himself and Johnson by announcing, after last year's national elections, the formation of the now highly-controversal Democratic Advisory Committee.

Conservative and moderate leaders of the party in Washington re-sented Butler's action in forming the committee, and some accuse the chairman of assuming authority of Congress to determine the party's legislative policy. Johnson, his fellow Texan, House

Speaker Sam Rayburn, and several others refused to serve on the Advisory Committee, though they were invited to do so.

The members of this National Advisory Committee - most of whom represent the liberal segment of the party, because the moderates and conservatives refused to accept appointment to it-have often been severely critical of the Southern attitude toward Democratic party policies.

As a result, there has been a growing demand in Dixie that this arm of the party - which the Southern leaders argue was created by Butler without authority from the duly elected delegates of the party-be abolished.

The verbal in-fighting between Butler and the Southern party leaders is considered by Washing-
